Legislature Condemns German 'Peersecution' in Resolution.

Consul Declares Action 'Impolite'

The German Situation.

The Massachusetts House of Representatives yesterday adopted without debate a resolution condemning alleged persecution of minority groups in Germany.

Meanwhile, throughout Germany, Jews and Catholics were still subjects of attacks. The president of the Steel Helmet veterans' organizations pleaded with Reichsfuehrer Hitler to save that once militant Hitler group.

By the United Press.

Boston, Aug. 12.—Baron Kurt von Tippelskirch, German consul at Boston, will forward to the German Embassy at Washington, for action, a copy of a resolution adopted today by the Massachusetts House of Representatives, condeming alleged persecution of minority groups in Germany.

Possibility that the incident might assume the prominence given the attack by New York Communists on the liner Bremen's flag was seen in Von Tippelskirch's statement that he considered the resolution "impolite and discourteous" and that he would call it to the attention of Dr. Hans Luther, the German Ambassador.

"With conditions as they are in the United States," said the consul, "it seems to me that the house should give its attention to solving domestic problems instead of those of the German republic."

Passed Without Debate.

The resolution, introduced by two Democratic representatives, Thomas Dorgan, of Boston, and Albert E. Morris, of Everett, was passed on voice vote without debate, copies to be sent both branches of Congress and all United States Senators and Representatives from Massachusetts. It read:

"Whereas it is reliably reported that certain inhabitants of Germany are being persecuted on account of their religious faith and nationality to an extent abhorrent to modern civilization; therefore be it

"Resolved, That the House of Representatives of the Genneral Court of Massachusetts affirms its conviction and belief that freedom and equality of mankind, regardless of race, color or creed, is indispensable to the maintenance of any modern civilization and views with alarm any violation of these sacred principles."

Informed of the consul's resentment, Dorgan and Morris issued statements saying, substantially, that "in regard to fundamental matters as to religion it is the duty of every nation to see that it is protected, because without religion we revert to the pagan days."

The consul said he would secure a certified copy of the resolution and then forward his report to the German Embassy for any action it may deem advisable.

By the United Press.

Berlin, Aug. 12.—Labor Minister Franz Seldte, Stahlhelm president, today made his last desperate—probably futile—effort to save war veterans 'organizations while the Nazi anti-Catholic and anti-Jewish campaigns surged higher and spread even to Poland, notorious years ago for pogroms.

Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler received Seldte to discuss the future of the Stahlhelm. It was Seldte's first success of a series of efforts to see Hitler in hope of forestalling forcible dissolution of the war veterans. He visited the Fuehrer twice at Berchtesgaden without obtaining audience.

Because of the determined anti-Steel Helmet campaign by extremist Nazis during recent weeks it was believed Hitler gave Seldte little hope for the organization's survival.

NEW YORK CITY.
Vagrant Philanthropy.

JOHN S. SMITH, of Latvia, will turn up in your section some lay, a ragged, gracious old hitch hiker who'll beg a cup of coffee or a meal and then, in return for your kindness, write you a wrapping-paper check for something like $10 or $75,000.

But don't get excited.

The check, you will notice, is on the Irving National Bank, of New York City, which—as you may have heard—has been out of existence for 12 years. The vagrant philanthropist has been plastering the Nation with a crazy quilt of just such checks and scores of his gullible recipients have tried to cash them from coast to coast.

"They are usually for $1,000," said an official, explaining the strange peregrinations of the travel-stained old panhandler. "If he likes the coffee and sandwiches, though, he may give as high as $75,000.

"The recipient usually thinks it is a good joke, but then she gets to thinking it over. She decides there might be something in it and gives it to her bank. That bank gets in touch with us.

"At first we wrote lengthy letters saying that we couldn't do anything about it. Now we just send a form letter."

The checks are always signed, "John S. Smith, of Riga, Latvia, Europe," and the most recent came to light last Friday in Springfield, Ill., when a housewife won a $1,000 order just off a drink of cool water that was greatly appreciated by the elderly traveler.

The first, officials said, turned up last January in Texas. It was $4,000. That "repaid" the grant of a cup of coffee and a sandwich.

The next, for $5,005—no one can explain the odd $5 except that it might have been for mustard—appeared in Los Angeles for a similar meal. Old Mr. Smith enjoyed a Fremont, Ohio, "hand out" so much that he wrote a wrapping paper check for $75,000 to the donor.

The Latvian hitch-hiker enriched the Wall Street files by inditing checks in Ontario and Merced, Calif.; Bend, Oreg.; St. John and Rosalia, Wash.; Terry, Mont.; Groton, S. Dak., and New Salem, N. Dak. Next came a long jump from Hagerstown Md.; Navasota, Tex., and Clinton, Conn.

Charity checks also came in from Butler, N. J.; Brunswick Mo.; Lewistown, Idaho; Belton and Blue Springs, Mo.; Oklahoma City and Sprague, Okla., and Waco, Goliad and Houston, Tex.

You aint heard nothin' yet. They poured in too, from Chester, Mass.; Marion Junction, Athens and Dullman, Ala.; Bowling Green and Louisville, Ky.; Clayville, Va.; Cambridge Springs, Pa.; Albany, N. Y.; Charleston, W. Va.; Rome, Ohio; Morristown and West Terre Haute, Ind., and Pana, Ill.

No prosecution is intended, trust company officials said, because no criminal act is committeed in tendering the checks. They are "rewards," not payments for anything purchased.

'We've taken a liking to the courtly old man," said the trust company spokesman. "But we only wish someone with a large bank account would go around the country on a similar mission."

$50,000,000 Roads Sought For Maryland

State to Submit Plans to Federal Officials Tomorrow.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Aug. 12.—A $50,000,000 roads program, calling for the construction of a system of high-speed highways from every section of the State converging on Baltimore City, will be presented to Federal authorities at Washington Wednesday. Members of the State roads commission, headed by its chairman, Dr. H. L. Tabler, and chief engineer to the commission, Nathan Smith, will submit the program for the next two years.

The program has been in preparation for some weeks, and when it is submitted Wednesday, Federal officials will be informed by Chairman Tabler that it has been approved by both Democratic and Republican leaders in Maryland.

That part of the program which would be attempted during the next year will take care of 2,700 unemployed men in sections where unemployment is the heaviest.

Baltimore to Be Hub.

The entire program is designed to make Baltimore City the hub, from which high-speed highways will radiate to every section of the State.

Those who have seen the program and, according to an official of the commission, who are in a position to know, declare that such a highway program as contemplated would increase the real estate value in the State from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000.

The program to be submitted Wednesday follows:

To give southern Maryland a high-speed highway into Baltimore City by developing the Defense highway.

To construct a speedway down the middle of the Eastern Shore, approximately 40 to 45 miles in length, which eventually will have its termini at Crisfield and Ocean City.

The completion of the Philadelphia highway to the Delaware line, where it will connect with the du Pont highway. This new stretch of highway would be about 17 miles in length. A section from Baltimore City to Aberdeen is now being graded and the new section included in the program would be from Perryville to the Delaware line.

Construction of 17 miles of the Baltimore to Annapolis boulevard, 3 miles of which already have been built.

State Called Roads Pioneer.

Construction of a highway out Edmonson avenue in Baltimore City, a distance of 11 miles, toward Ellicott City, which is aimed at making a better approach and eliminating curves and other hazards, and also provides for a new bridge across the Patapsco.

Construction of shoulders and resurfacing as many miles as possible of the Reistertown road to Baltimore City.

Rebuilding of route 40 from Baltimore City to Clear Spring, 12 miles west of Hagerstown. The initial program calls for rebuilding the highway a distance of 5 miles east and a like distance west from Frederick, and 5 miles east and a like distance from Hagerstown, and then completing the highway between Clear Spring and Baltimore with a new section being rebuilt each year.

The program for route 40 also calls for the elimination of all one-way bridges, cutting down of knolls and resurfacing. A by-pass through Hagerstown on this route also will be constructed for which $550,000 already has been provided.

In speaking of the proposed highway program, an official of the commission said Maryland was a pioneer in the building of good roads, that other States, realizing the value of good roads, had profited by the mistakes made by Maryland and had pushed their roads programs to such an extent in recent years that Maryland now finds itself near the bottom of the list.

Roosevelt Bars Aleutian Isles To Air Traffic

24 Reservations Closed to Planes; Postoffice Seeks Transpacific Bids.

President Roosevelt yesterday issued orders forbidding civilian aircraft to fly over the Aleutian Islands, which extend 900 miles westward from Alaska and reach within 700 miles of Asia.

The Aleutian Islands were included in a list of 24 military and naval reservations over which the President ordered that civilian craft should not fly. The islands differ from the other localities, however, in that they are not fortified and are not used for military or naval purposes.

Under the Washington Treaty, which expires December 31, 1936, the United States agreed not to fortify the islands. There has been considerable discussion, however, of use of the islands by the Army and Navy in event the treaty is not renewed.

Wilcox Bill Is Signed.

Simultaneously, the President signed the Wilcox bill providing for establishment of a series of air bases in various parts of the country.

From the Postoffice Department came an announcement that bids for operation of a transpacific air-mail and passenger service "to promote more friendly and better trade relations with Far Eastern countries" would be opened late in October.

"Public safety" was advanced by high military officials as the reason for the new order. Officers discounted speculation that the new regulation had anything to do with a "spy scare."

The Postoffice Department's announcement said:

"Decision as to the award of contract will be announced as soon as praticable after October 21, 1935. The contract will be for a term of 10 years.

Route Is Outlined.

"The route specifically stated is from San Francisco to Honolulu and Manila to Canton and return. A committee composed of the Secretary of State, the Secretary of War, the Attorney General, the Postmaster General, the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of

Hopson Faces House Lobby Session Today

Subpena Is Served Upon Utility Magnate After 3 Weeks' Search.

Committee Will Hear Witness as to Part in Holding Bill Fight.

By Felix Bruner.

Howard C. Hopson, utilities magnate, sought for weeks as a witness in the congressional lobby investigation, is scheduled to testify before the House Rules Committee at 10 a. m. today.

Representative O'Connor (Democrat), New York, chairman of the committee, announced that Hopson, who is reputed to control the Associated Gas & Electric System, at last had been served with a subpena.

The whereabouts of the witness remained a mystery. O'Connor denied he knew where Hopson was, but said that he had been assured that service had been obtained and that Hopson would appear "if he doesn't have a physical collapse or something."

One report was Hopson had been located in New Jersey. It was reported he was staying last night in a nearby town. Another rumor said he was in Washington. O'Connor said one of the committee's investigators was remaining with Hopson overnight.

Wanted Only as Witness.

The utilities man is wanted only as a witness to answer questions concerning his part and that of his company in the alleged lobby against the utilities holding company bill. There is no legal way in which the committee can hold him pending his appearance, but in event of his failure to appear contempt action could be brought.

The intensive search for Hopson started about 10 days ago. Last week a witness told the House Rules Committee he had talked with Hopson at the Shoreham Hotel the night before. This precipitated a race between House and Senate investigators to the hotel. Hopson was gone.

Later in the day it was reported he was staying at the estate of Patrick J. Hurley, former Secretary of War, near Leesburg. Investigators made a hurried trip to the Hurley home but Hopson was not there. The following day Hurley appeared before the Senate investigating committee and denied that he knew where Hopson was or that he represented him.

Turned to Maryland.

The hunt then turned to Maryland, but apparently was just as unsuccessful as previous attempts to find the missing witness. Intense rivalry developed between the Senate and House committee investigators, each attempting to produce the witness first. After the Maryland hunt "censorship" was clamped on the details and there was no official statement until O'Connor's brief announcement yesterday that the witness had been found and was expected to appear.

The committee has evidence that the Associated Gas & Electric Co. spent $805,000 in fighting the holding company bill.

Meanwhile, prospects for agreement on the bill, the passage of which President Roosevelt has demanded, were growing more remote. With adjournment of Congress in sight the conference committee, which has been wrangling for days over the measure, especially over the provision for a "death sentence" for "unnecessary" holding companies, still admittedly was far from an understanding.

Senator Wheeler, chairman of the Senate conferees, said that it might be possible to arrive at an agreement, but that if this proves im-

Chamber Declares U. S. Can Trim Budget by $1,690,000,000.

Revenue Efforts Held Ridiculous

Tax Statement Asserts Work Relief Could Be Cut Billion.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Ridiculing the slight contribution toward a balanced Federal budget contained in the pending tax bill, the United States Chamber of Commerce yesterday pointed out means of reducing expenditures for the current fiscal year by a total of $1,690,000,000, which, it was held, would not seriously interfere with any governmental function.

The chamber's statisticians made a computation on the basis of increased employment and the Administration's plan to return 1,500,000 unemployables to the care of their local communities, which indicated that in the expenditure of the work-relief $4,000,000,000 fund $1,100,000,000 could be saved.

Other items in the total which the chamber's Federal finance committee contended could be saved were $250,000,000 in the regular expenditures; $18,000,000 in interest charges on excessive funds placed to the credit of disbursing officers and agencies, and the recovery of $322,000,000 in unneeded assets of Government-owned corporations and agencies.

Statement Given Congress.

The chamber's statement, which was sent to the House Ways and Means Committee and to the Senate Finance Committee, did not specify how these reductions might be made, but it pointed to general conditions surrounding Federal expenditures in order to substantiate its conclusions.

The point of the chamber's "economy" statement was that far more progress could be made toward a balanced budget by reducing and restricting expenditures than by increasing taxes on the wealthy alone, as proposed in the House bill and as followed by the Senate Finance Committee yesterday.

Chamber attaches informally pointed out that if only one-fourth of the possible reductions estimated by them were carried out, the Treasury could save more under this year's budget than it could obtain in the fiscal year of 1938 under the provisions of the House tax bill.

Indeed, the chamber pointed out that the full revenue yield of that measure, estimated at $270,000,000 annually, will not be reached until the 1938 fiscal year. The House bill if enacted into law tomorrow would add only $24,000,000 to the Treasury in the current fiscal year and not more than $131,500,000 in the fiscal year which starts July 1 next, the chamber pointed out.

"In expenditures officially projected for the current fiscal year reaching $8,000,000,000," the chamber's committee asserted, "it is too obvious to need argument that there readily can be a reduction of $24,000,000 or 3-10 of 1 per cent.

July Excess Figured.

Indeed, in order to obtain such a saving it would have been necessary to avoid only one-third of the excess in expenditures in the single month of July, 1935, over those in July, 1934, this excess being $136,000,000, exclusive of an increase of $70,000,000 in proper increases for reserve funds and of an increase of $54,000,000 in debt retirement."

The chamber pointed out that surprising NRA expenditures last month were 197,000 greater than in July, 1934, even though the Supreme Court in May had struck down the authority of the NRA and the President in June ordered the personnel of the agency skeletonized as rapidly as possible.

The economy statement held that

Roosevelt Tour Waited; Hoover Met by Silence

President Likely to Open Campaign Guns on Trip to West.

Herbert Hoover's challenge to President Roosevelt to specify now any changes he desires in the Constitution yesterday failed to bring any response whatever from the White House, but it brought a renewal of discussions in political circles of the part the former President will play in next year's election maneuvering.

It was not expected President Roosevelt or any of his close associates would rush forward with a statement as to their plans for changing the Constitution at the demand of the titular leader of the Republican Party. But some kind of a statement from secondary Democratic figures was expected.

It did not materialize, however, except in the form of jeering remarks about Hoover's desire to be renominated—a prospect some Democrats seem to welcome, although others are not quite so sure it would be a continuation of Roosevelt "luck."

Mr. Roosevelt is not reluctant to engage in a few political exchanges, it was said, but on the contrary looks forward to the time when he can be free of pressing governmental mattars in which to fire the first shots in his campaign for re-election. This is expected to come next month when he makes a transcontinental journey, ostensibly as a vacation, to visit the San Diego Fair, but also to stop frequently en route for speeches.

Democrats Silent.

Hoover's Chicago challenge to the President was confirmation of the belief previously expressed that the Republicans are anxious to have Mr. Roosevelt pitch next year's battle on the necessity for amending the Constitution in order to give the Federal Government authority to do the things which the Supreme Court held it could not do lawfully under the NRA.

At the same time, many Democratic leaders are displaying greater distaste for such a battle. It is significant that not a word about the need for changing the Constitution has been heard from the President or any of his close associates—except Raymond Moley, who is not as close as he used to be—for several weeks.

In Administration circles it was indicated that all discussion of changing the Constitution, answers to Republican attacks and Mr. Roosevelt's future plans will have to wait on the adjournment of Congress. The President was represented as too engrossed on getting his "must" list of legislation enacted and new administrative machinery set up to give any time to exchanging political brickbats with his opponents.

Instead of putting President Roosevelt on a "hot spot," which some thought to be Hoover's object, the latter's statement aroused anew discussion as to whether the former President was a candidate for

Revenue Estimate Cut 200 Millions

By Robert C. Albright.

Eliminating all newly proposed taxes on low-bracket incomes, but slapping additional surtax rates on $1,000,000 earnings, the Senate Finance Committee wrote a new $250,000,000 tax bill yesterday closely in line with the President's views.

The about-face was executed at a late afternoon session, after Administration pressure and some public opposition forced a realignment of sentiment within the committee.

A report was filed with the Senate before midnight, and Chairman Pat Harrison hopes to call the new bill up for Senate action tomorrow. Leaders said the revision, combined with House Ways and Means Committee approval of the Guffey coal bill, brightened hopes for adjournment next week.

La Follette Plan Rejected.

Rejection of the La Follette income tax schedule, starting surtaxes with a 4 per cent rate on $3,000 incomes, and lowering exemptions to $800 for single persons and to $2,000 for married, came on an 8-to-7 vote, after the committee had ordered reconsideration.

This automatically threw $220,000,000 in potential revenue out of the bill, and partially to make up for the loss the committee quickly broadened the range of corporation income taxes, imposed a new surtax scale starting over $1,000,000, and invoked an inter-corporate dividend tax favored by the President, but opposed by the House.

New Amendments.

Last-minute amendments added to the bill provide:

1. Surtaxes starting at 60 per cent on incomes of $1,000,000 to $1,500,000, and graduated to 75 per cent on over $10,000,000. Estimated yield, about $5,000,000. Committee vote on amendment, 11 to 3.

2. Graduated tax on corporation income, starting with 12½ per cent on up to $15,000, and graded to impose 14 per cent on $15,000 to $40,000 income, 15 per cent on $40,000 to $100,000, and 15½ per cent on over $100,000. Present tax, flat 13¾. Estimated yield, $60,000,000. Committee vote, 10 to 4.

3. Inter-corporate dividend tax averaging 2 per cent. First 15 per cent of dividends received from other corporations would be taxable as income. In other words, such dividends would be exempt, up to an 85 per cent credit. Estimated yield, $39,000,000. Committee vote, 8 to 4.

House Section Out.

The committee stood firm by its decision Saturday to reject the proposed House inheritance levies, starting at 5 per cent on the first taxable $10,000 and ranging to 75 per cent on more than $10,000,000.

In lieu of this, the committee earlier decided to lift the estate tax rate from a maximum of 60 per cent to 70 per cent on estates of over $50,000,000, with exemptions lowered from $50,000 to $40,000. The committee estimates that the new estates tax, combined with a gift tax approximating three-fourths of the estate tax, would yield $100,000,000 in revenue.

The committee also confirmed its earlier action raising the capital stock tax from $1 to $1.50 per $1,000, and imposing an excess profits tax of 6 per cent on profits of from 10 to 15 per cent, and 12 per cent on profits over that amount. The present excess profits "policing" tax is 5 per cent on profits of over 12½ per cent. Combined revenue yield from the new capital stock and excess profits taxes was estimated at $65,000,000. From this, however, would have to be deducted from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 revenue lost by exempting corporare gifts to charity up to 5 per cent of income.

The committee's swift policy shift from a "sock the millions" bill, to the original "soak the wealthy" objectives of the Administration, followed intimations of White House

A.F.L. Upholds WPA Strike; Asks Shift to PWA Supervision

New York Labor Head Rallies Forces to Extend Relief Walkout to All Workers; Protest Movement Grows in Other Large Cities.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 12.—Union leaders protesting hourly "security wage" rates on Works Progress Administration projects rallied forces tonight in an attempt to spread strikes as the American Federation of Labor officially upheld their protest on the rate.

Labor's executive council at Atlantic City, however, recommended transferring WPA projects to the Public Works Administration to curb further work relief strikes.

George Meany, president of the New York State Federation of Labor, emerged from a parley with his lieutenants voicing new defiance.

"Even though they force our men back to work, the entire Roosevelt Administration program is doomed as a colossal failure," Meany asserted.

He said the strike would "Go ahead despite the untrue statements of our adversaries. A great many more men are out than our opponents are willing to admit," Meany said.

Meany declared he did not believe the Administration was willing to let "people starve if they refused to work;" charged that Gen. Johnson failed to put 5,000 men back to work each month, and said skilled workers were being used on the Astor building project at cheap prices.

[At Albany informed sources said yesterday the New York State Federation of Labor would be asked to act on the disputed wage scale at its convention beginning here August 20.]

Today was set as the "dead line" for striking WPA laborers to report back to work in their protest strike against the $93.50 "security wage," which union labor holds destructive of prevailing "hourly" wage standards.

Wallace Hits Stories Blaming Pork Shortage on U.S. Program

Branding as "malicious and untrue propaganda" the stories that the Government hog-reduction program was responsible for the present high price of pork, Secretary Wallace yesterday declared the program really had prevented higher prices.

Quoting a dispatch from Chicago attributing the price increase to the Government program and quoting "meat authorities," Secretary Wallace said:

"I am curious to know if these unnamed sources are packers who are suing in court for recovery of processing taxes already paid or sequestered in court on the theory that the packers pay these taxes, while at the same time spreading anonymous propaganda through the press to persuade consumers that the tax is borne by consumers."

Meanwhile, Washington housewives were continuing to pay increasingly higher prices for pork. A local chain grocery concern quoted these prices as of today and a year ago:

	Price today cents	Last year cents
Pork chops	33 to 45	21 to 33
Pork roast	33	33
Fresh ham	35	25
Fresh shoulder	27	18

Secretary Wallace contended pigs raised in 1933 did not affect the present market, because the average age of a pig when it goes to market is nine months. The reduction program was carried on only during 1933. Thus, Wallace argued, much feed was saved in 1933 and carried over to the drought year of 1934. This meant, he said, more pork in 1934—affecting the present market.

Father, 3 Brothers on Relief, Representative 'Not Ashamed'

By the Associated Press.

Ironwood, Mich., Aug. 2.—Representative Frank E. Hook (Democrat), Michigan, declared today that if anyone tries to use the fact that his father and three of his brothers have received Government relief "as a club over my head, I'll just fight all the harder."

Representative Hook said his relatives had been obliged to apply for relief before he ran for Congress and declared "I'm not a bit ashamed of it."

"I had nothing to do with getting them on relief and I have nothing to do with keeping them on," he said. "I wish I could support all of my relatives."

Relief rolls here show that Michael Hook, father of the Representative, and Herman Hook, a brother, are receiving work relief, and that George and Lawrence Hook were employed through May on work relief projects. Representative Hook said he believed they had been transferred to the Works Progress Administration rolls.

The Representative, whose criticism of the State relief administration last winter inspired an investigation, said he had been here since Wednesday to expedite WPA activities in this district.

In Lansing, Dr. William Haber, State emergency relief administrator, confirmed Hook's assertion that no inquiry was planned into relief extended the Hook family.

"There was nothing irregular about it," Dr. Haber said. "Representative Hook is not responsible for the welfare of everyone related to him."

12-11 Vote Won By Guffey Bill In Committee

Two House Members Say 'Present,' Else Action Would Have Failed.

After weeks of deadlock, the Administration-sponsored Guffey coal bill, setting up a miniature NRA to govern the soft coal industry, yesterday received a favorable vote in a House Ways and Means Committee predominantly opposed to its provisions.

The coal control measure, through which the President proposes to test the flexibility of the Constitution, is the last bill on the Administration's "must" list remained unapproved by the House.

A 12-to-11 committee vote in favor of the measure was obtained only after two members of the group, known to Representatives John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, and Wesley E. Disney, Oklahoma, Democrats.

Senate Action Due.

Assurances by Senate Laders that the Senate will call the measure up for action this session figured prominently in breaking the deadlock. Several House members objected to "taking the rap" on a measure, unless, the Senate was subjected to a similar test.

President Roosevelt had written Representative Samuel B. Hill (Democrat), of Washington, requesting a report on the measure regardless of "reasonable" doubts as to constitutionality. Administration forces argued the bill would be a material factor in averting a coal strike.

Although the measure is certain to run into serious obstacles in the Senate, which may lead to its abandonment for the session, House leaders are counting on combined labor and Administration strength in the House to push it through. A poll of the House indicated it may win in that chamber by about 20 votes.

Bill Greatly Modified.

The Ways and Means Committee will meet again today for the purpose of formally reporting the bill. Leaders plan to call it up in the House tomorrow or Thursday.

Setting up a national bituminous coal commission to administer control of the soft coal industry, the bill has been substantially modified, both by a sub-committee headed by Representative Hill and in the full Ways and Means Committee.

An appropriation of $300,000,000 to be used by the Secretary of Interior to purchase coal mines for the purpose of taking them out of production was eliminated.

As originally introduced, the bill also imposed a tax of 25 per cent on mined coal, rebating 99 per cent of this to operators who cooperated. The Ways and Means Committee reduced this tax to 15 per cent and slashed the rebate to 90 per cent.

Rules Snag in Offing.

Redrafted to meet constitutional objections, the bill now declares that the mining of coal directly affects interstate commerce.

One of the next barriers to be hurdled by the Administration is the House Rules Committee, which may be asked to report a rule on the measure.

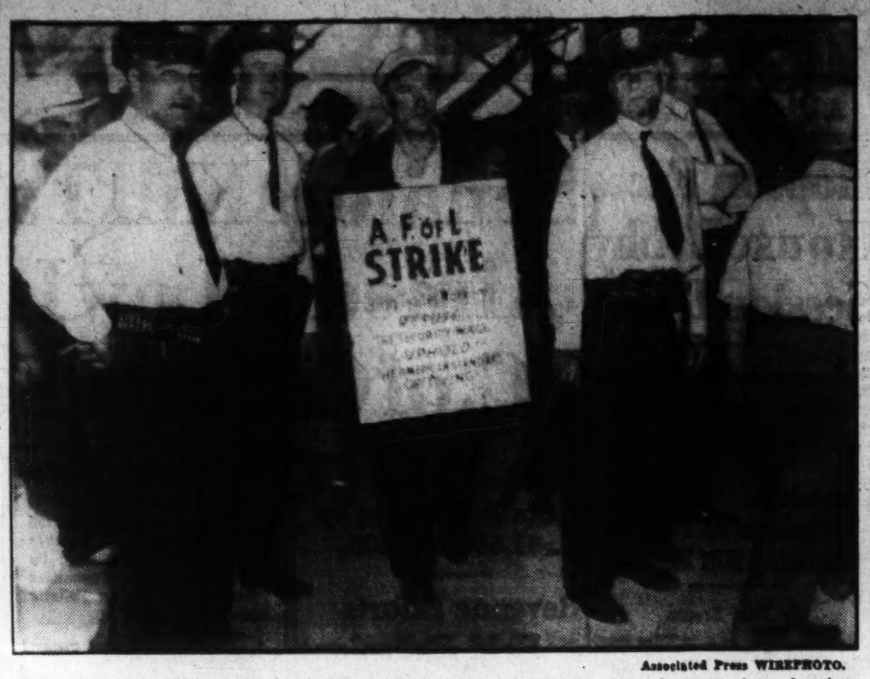
New York Strikers Picket WPA Workers



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Union men who quit work in protest against WPA wages circled the Astor low-cost Astor housing project in New York yesterday. But police were out in force to prevent any clashes.

made as to the effectiveness and extent of the walkout, union leaders made an alliance with non-union workers organized in unemployment councils. Leaders of these groups, including "white collar" workers, promised to call out their men from WPA jobs.

Shortly after work began in the morning, Langdon W. Post, chairman of the City Housing Authority, announced flatly the strike was "broken." Park Commissioner Robert Moses reported the number of strikers on park PWA projects had been reduced to one-half Saturday's total.

A canvass of all WPA projects late in the day by the office of Gen. Johnson brought a report that less than 1,000 of the 15,000 skilled workers engaged had walked off jobs.

Union leaders characterized WPA reports as untrue and said the strike was slowly spreading. They continued to predict a "complete tie-up" of all Federal projects in the city.

During the day flying squadrons of union organizers toured WPA projects to force suspension of major jobs and urge both union and non-union men to walk out.

With New York City the scene of what amounted to a test case in union labor's battle against the New Deal wage scale, other large centers over the Nation reported little of definite nature as to the spread of the strike.

In Cleveland, the district WPA reported 2,287 men began work on 39 WPA projects with no indication of a strike. Strike "threats" were voiced in New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania and up-State New York.

At Philadelphia Navy Yard officials said practically all WPA project workers at the yard returned to their jobs today. A strike was called Friday and Norman Blumberg, secretary of the Building Trades Council, said "the strike is still on."

At York, Pa., the Intercounty Unemployed and Works Division Alliance, representing unemployed and relief groups in Berks, Schuylkill, Lancaster, Lehigh and York counties, adopted a resolution today to call a strike on every PWA project for a 70-cent hour, 30-hour week and a 6-hour day. Another resolution was for a 50 per cent increase in direct relief, plus electric and ice allowances.

At Rochester a group of Monroe County relief workers today filed a formal protest against proposed WPA wage scales as an attack on the American standard of living.

In a letter to District WPA Director Robert G. Hoffmann, Fred Struble, secretary of the workers' organization, declared the establishment of a $35 monthly wage for unskilled workers is little better than making the Government a "full-fledged sweatshop employer."

Meanwhile, in St. Paul, Minn., a delegation claiming to represent the unemployed today demanded Gov. Floyd B. Olson's "influence" in WPA "adjustments" on threat of bringing a strike.

Mrs. Mabel Koropov, executive secretary of the St. Paul Unemployed Council, headed the group demanding union wages to offset conditions which she said make it "impossible to exist."

The support of non-union relief workers in New York City came after a conference between Thomas Murray, chairman of the executive committee of the Central Trades and Labor Council, and representatives of the Workers Unemployed Union, the Workers Alliance of America, the Bookkeepers, Accountants and Stenographers Union, the relief workers organization committee and the unemployed council.

Particular significance was given to Murray's statement "we have given our promise that in the event of a settlement every person, who quits his job in protest of the security wage, whether union or non-union, will be included in the negotiations."

"We are not backing up an inch," Murray declared, "and in answer to the President, who said there is no strike in New York City, we want to say that this city is on strike and we are going to follow up by action and not words."

The city's Astor slum elimination low cost house project was regarded as a basic indicator by both sides in the strike. Workers on this project were given orders to return today or be displaced.

Only Unionists May Be Put On PWA Projects

Administration Proposal Coincides With Labor's Demands in WPA.

By the Associated Press.

Organized labor's demand for transfer of all work relief projects to the Public Works Administration coincided last night with disclosures that the Administration is considering employment of union labor exclusively on housing and PWA jobs.

Harry L. Hopkins and Secretary Ickes declined to comment on American Federation of Labor resolutions demanding elimination of the WPA in work relief construction.

Hopkins' aids had contended, however, that because no deductions result from bad weather, the $19 to $94 a month work relief schedule pays as well as PWA over a period oftimes. PWA officials predicted yesterday that a recent change permitting local authorities to fix wages—except that the union scale must be followed where it prevails on other public construction—would bring a reduction in payments.

WPA officials meanwhile expressed satisfaction at reports that WPA strikers in Cleveland and Philadelphia had returned to work and at the statement by Hugh S. Johnson, New York WPA chieftain, that only 1,000 of 15,000 skilled workmen had walked out.

Importance of the contemplated change in employment methods on housing and PWA projects lay in the fact that union labor has been virtually barred from participation in the $4,000,000,000 work relief program because comparatively few building trade members were on relief.

In addition, comparatively few WPA projects will involve skilled workmen because all new construction over $25,000 must be carried out by PWA.

Housing already had been exempted from the requirement that 90 per cent of those employed must be taken off relief rolls. Th President's wage regulations provided also that jobs would be filled from United States Employment Service lists.

A. F. of L. Stands Pat

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 12.—The American Federation of Labor, through officially expressed statements of its executive council, stood pat tonight on insisting upon prevailing hourly rates of pay on Government WPA jobs.

In upholding the prevailing wage scale standard, the executive council, through President William Green, recommended that all Federal WPA projects be transferred to the PWA to forestall further work relief strikes over the country.

Green, in handing out the statement, declared the A. F. of L. "cheerfully accepts" the Government "security wage" or any other monthly wage for relief workers.

"The American Federation of Labor asks only that the prevailing hourly standard wage rate be maintained in the payment of the monthly security wage."

Search Futile for Body Of Drowned D. C. Girl

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 12.—Search by watermen and others continued throughout today, but without finding the body of Miss Marie Kidwell, 19, who acoidentally drowned off Holland Point, Cheasapeake Bay, 30 miles south of here, yesterday afternoon.

Miss Kidwell, who lived at 617 S street northwest, Washington, and was the daughter of Norman W. Kidwell, was a member of a fishing party that put out from Deale, Anne Arundel County. The group made the trip in a boat owned by Louis Olasson, of Washington, who with his brother, Milton, and several other friends, were unsuccessful in efforts to save the girl after she fell over the side in 35 feet of water.

N. Y. Is Alloted 7 Millions More For WPA Work

'White-Collar' Class Will Be Benefited Chiefly by New Federal Projects.

By the Associated Press.

A Federal allotment of $7,561,291 for work relief projects in New York City, intended mostly for the "white-collar" class was announced yesterday by the Works Progress Administration in the midst of a relief workers' strike for union wages.

Actors, musicians, newspaper workers and statisticians are among those in line for jobs under the new allotment, which, it is expected, will be supplemented by private contribution.

"While no contributions have as yet been formally pledged by the sponsors of the program for which these funds have been allotted," the WPA said, "definite assurances have been given that the Federal funds will be supplemented by a large additional contribution."

Funds for Concerts.

One of the largest items is $1,465,962 for band and orchestra concerts in schools, museums, armories, parks and over the municipal broadcasting station. Another is $837,109 for playground leadership at parks and beaches by trained recreation workers.

Actors and road companies will be sent into the CCC camps in the second and third corps areas to entertain the youths quartered in them under an item of $906,960. In addition, the WPA is contributing $1,521,764 for professional dramatic performances in parks, schools, settlement houses and playgrounds. Another $110,000 will be spent "to use newspaper editorial workers to gather complete, accurate and unbiased information on projects."

Fossils to Be Studied.

Other items include:

Preparation of a complete illustrated catalogue of the forominifira fossils, involving the classification and cross-indexing of some 12,000 species, $236,210.

Cartographic study, $486,362 (preparation of maps and models to be used as visual aids in education.)

Preparation of simple graphic and pictorial material on social and economic phases of American life to be used by writers, schools and industrial museums, $18,264.

A study of actual psychiatric reports of the case records of all the mental hygiene clinics in New York City to learn the incidence of mental disease among different national and racial groups, $23,088.

To provide circus units in the parks and playgrounds during the summer and in armories and other suitable places during the winter, $333,260.

Theories Conflict In Dickinson Case

Defense Lawyers Differ in Views of Slaying.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Aug. 12.—Defense attorneys presented conflicting theories today to explain the death of Howard Carter Dickinson, New York attorney, to the jury trying William Lee Ferris and three women.

Ralph B. Guy, attorney for Ferris, asked the jury to believe that Dickinson shot himself, either accidentally or in a "state of drunken melancholy."

George S. Fitzgerald, attorney for Loretta Jackson and Jean Miller, who also presented the final defense argument for Florence Jackson, theorized that Ferris and Dickinson had been working together on some mysterious business, that Ferris may have been interested in finding legal papers which Dickinson carried, and the slaying was linked to the documents.

The prosecution contends that Ferris and the three women plotted to rob and kill Dickinson, because the women wanted money to organize a "girl show."

The case is expected to reach the jury Tuesday.

Orphir Resumes Hunt For Hulk of Lusitania

Kinsale, Ireland, Aug. 12 (AP).—With supplies replenished after a month's fruitless effort to locate the sunken Lusitania, the salvage ship Orphir sailed tonight for further attempts. The Orphir has been systematically surveying the ocean floor.

The searchers believed they had come within a quarter of a mile of the hulk of the Lusitania, but this theory was scouted by the crew and divers of the salvage steamer Arpione, which has been working here for 18 months.

The Orphir already has located four large hulks, none of them the Lusitania.

Building Begun On Flood Levee In Potomac Par

$55,000 PWA Projects to Protect Structures in Federal Triangle.

Construction of the Potomac Park levee, a flood-control project which has been under discussion for years, was begun yesterday with the transfer of the first truckloads of soil to the Washington Monument Grounds.

One hundred thousand cubic yards of excavation material taken from the site of the proposed Interior Department Building will go into the levee, a $55,000 PWA measure, said C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital parks.

The $55,000 allotment will cover all expenses, including grading, seeding and road construction, Finnan declared. The soil is being hauled and deposited at no cost to the Government.

Raising the level of the western portion of the Monument Grounds to a maximum of 15 feet, the project is intended to protect the new Federal triangle buildings against flood. It has been approved by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The work will force the immediate closing of the four tennis courts on the Sixteenth street side of the grounds, the nearby soccer field, and the baseball diamonds on Constitution avenue between Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets. It will not interfere, said Finnan, with continued operation of the municipal swimming pool or the Seventeenth street tennis courts.

He added that the closed recreation facilities will be replaced as soon as possible, some of them probably in different locations. The levee is expected to be completed by the end of this year.

Maryland Plant To Offer Plane In U. S. Contest

Glenn Martin Bomber Is Groomed at Baltimore for Competition.

A new "flying fortress" is being groomed at the Glenn Martin plant in Baltimore for entrance in a competition for new bombing planes for the Army Air Corps, it was stated yesterday at the War Department.

The competition opens late this month at Dayton, Ohio. Among other planes that will go through their paces in front of a board of high-ranking Army officers will be the four-engined Boeing bomber on which construction was completed less than a month ago at Seattle, Wash.

The new Martin bomber has a wing spread of 76 feet and a loaded weight of more than 10 tons. Air Corps officials have expressed a desire to get a 250-mile-an-hour plane into the competition, the winner of which will receive a large Government order for new airplanes.

The present models of the Martin planes now lused by tactica units of the General Headquarters Air Force fly nearly 200 miles an hour. Company officials have stated that "it appears that the new airplane is materially faster than the current model."

The newest of the "flying fortresses" is described as an all-metal, mid-wing monoplane, with retractable landing gear. Power is supplied by two cyclone engines of more than 800 horsepower, streamlined into the wing. The plane carries a crew of four or five. Three machine guns cover all angles of approach and there are special bomb racks.

The plane is equipped with a two-way radio, automatic "robot" pilot, adjustable propellers and a new "homing" navigation device. Glenn Martin, designer of the new ship, built the first of his famous bombing line in 1918. In 1932 he changed his design from biplane to monoplane.

Commerce will be formed to examine all bids; and further that upon the advice of the committee the Postmaster General will determine which, if any, bid should be accepted as well as other administrative action in connection with the award of contract.

"The frequency of the service will be once a week. The specified load of mails provided is 800 pounds with provision for the carrying of any excess mails offered."

Postoffice officials also will require multi-motored seaplanes. The maximum rates authorized are $2 per mile for the specified load and $1 per pound per 1,000 miles in excess of the specified load."

Postal officials retain the right to reduce the contract rate if in the opinion of the Postmaster General the rates are too high in view of the operating results of the route. The rates may be changed only after five years of operation, and the contractor has the right to quit operating under the new rates if he so desires.

According to yesterday's announcement, the Postoffice Department "will not contenance the undue promotion of the sale of stock of a bidding or contracting corporation. Also, the books, records and accounts are subject to examination by Government representatives."

One company certain to submit a bid for the business is Pan-American Airways, owners of the clipper plane that has pioneered early flights between California, Hawaii and Wake. At present the clipper is off on a trial flight to Guam, third stopping point on the Pacific line.

With the co-operation of the Navy Department, Pan-American has installed bases along the proposed Pacific route in preparation for the beginning of an air line.

At least one other bidder, backed by a steamship line operating between California and the Orient, is reported to be preparing to submit a bid for the business.

The executive order issued by the President yesterday establishing "airspace reservations" over the military and naval reservations was published "upon the joint recommendation of the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of Commerce."

In addition to the Aleutian area, the reservations designated are Picatinny Arsenal, Dover, N. J.; Savanna ordnance depot, Savanna, Ill.; Nansemond ordnance depot, Gallup, N. Mex.; Camp Stanley ordnance reservations, Leon Springs, Tex.; Fort Hancock, Sandy Hook, N. J.; Fort Saulsbury, near Milford, Del.; Fort Pickens, western portion of Santa Rosa Island, Pensacola Bay, Fla.; Fort Barry, near Point Bonita lighthouse, San Francisco Bay, Calif.; Fort Canby, near Cape Disappointment lighthouse, Wash.; Fort Casey, near Admiralty Head lighthouse, Wash., and the following naval ammunition depots:

Hingham, Mass.; Fort Lafayette, N. Y.; Lake Denmark, N. J.; St. Julians Creek, Va.; Hawthorne, Nev.; Mare Island, Calif., and Puget Sound, Wash.; the naval mine depot, Yorktown, Va.; naval torpedo stations at Newport, R. I., and Keyport, Wash.; the naval ordnance plant, Baldwin, Long Island, N. Y.; the naval fuel depot, San Diego, Calif.

Honolulu, Aug. 12.—Supplies for the far-Pacific stations of the Pan-American Airways' projected route to the Orient were put aboard the pioneering clipper seaplane today.

Capt. R. O. D. Sullivan said the plane will take off at 6 a. m. tomorrow (11:30 a. m. E. S. T.) for Midway Island, heading into weather "not good, but not unfavorable."

It is a 1,323-mile flight to Midway Island, where the clipper plane will remain two or three days before continuing on 1,191 miles to Wake Island.

Among the supplies loaded were fresh vegetables for the Pan-American personnel at the tiny island outposts, where fueling and radio direction stations were recently established.

Senate Passes NRA Code Bill Setting Wages

Black 30-Hour-Week Plan Discarded Amid Cries of 'Discrimination.'

By the Associated Press.

Shouldering aside the Black 30-hour-week bill, the Senate yesterday voted to impose NRA code wages and hours on industries dealing with the Government.

Amid cries of "discrimination," the Black bill, which would have clamped a 30-hour week on all industries engaging in interstate commerce, went down, 61 to 23. The Walsh bill soon after was sped on its way to the House, sponsored in principle by the Administration.

But first an amendment by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, was accepted limiting the measure's operation to two years instead of three as originally provided.

Vainly a trio of Democrats pleaded for acceptance of the 30-hour-week bill after Clark offered it as a substitute for the Walsh bill.

"If you put the Administration's feet to the fire, they won't dare defeat this bill," shouted Senator Long (Democrat), of Louisiana.

He denounced the Walsh measure, declaring it was like the "Fascisti system" in permitting the President to exempt certain industries or individuals from its provisions.

"The same arguments were advanced against the eight-hour-day act for railroads that are used against the Black bill," Clark said.

Defense Is Brief.

Senator Black, (Democrat) Alabama, spoke only briefly in defense of the bill he had sponsored through several sessions of Congress.

Senator Austin, (Republican) Vermont, opened the attack on the 30-hour week measure, declaring it smacked of "boycott and embargo" in its plan of denying entry of interstate commerce to any commodity produced in violation of the five-day week, six-hour day schedule.

The measure, he said, would put labor in a "strait-jacket" by "denying it the right to sell its services for more than 30-hours a week."

Long's assertion that labor considered the 30-hour week bill its most important goal was met by Senator Walsh, (Democrat) Massachusetts, author of the Government contract bill, with a telegram from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, expressing the "sincere hope" that "no substitute, meritorious as it may seem," should be allowed to block passage of the Walsh bill.

The federation has strongly backed the 30-hour week, but evidently agreed with several Senators that it had no chance at this time.

While the Walsh bill, which was passed without a record vote, seeks to set up NRA standards of hours and pay within the scope of Government dealings with industry, the President was given wide authority to modify the requirements or to exempt industry entirely.

Specifically, the bill required that employes of any organization contracting to furnish supplies or services to the Government or to any agency using Federal funds "will be paid not less than such minimum rates of pay and employed not to exceed such maximum hours as shall be designated specifically or by reference in the invitation to bid." The invitation also would require a statement of the employer "that no person under 16 years of age and no convict labor" has been employed.

Reserve Bank Exempt.

Federal Reserve Banks or other such institutions were exempt from application of the measure through a provision stating the act "shall not apply to loans to financial institutions where the funds are commingled with the funds of the borrower and used for general business purposes."

A section of the bill which would make the regulations apply "to Government agencies in competition with private enterprise for contracts described in this act," was stricken out on the appeal of Pacific Coast Senators, fearful it would hamper operations of the Government shipyards.

The agency to administer the act was left to selection of the President. The skeleton NRA unit has been projected for the job.

Special penalties for violation, ranging all the way from fines to revocation of the contracts, would be imposed. One provided that if an employer required employes to "kick back" part of their pay after receiving it in compliance with the contract, the employer should be penalized five times the amount of the kick-back.

Sirovitch Suggests Patriotic Drug Labels

By the Associated Press.

Representative Sirovich (Democrat), of New York, proposed yesterday to use red, white and blue labels as a means of protecting the public from misbranded foods and drugs.

His testimony before a House Interstate Commerce Committee ended hearings on the Copeland pure food bill which already has been passed by the Senate.

Sirovich, who said the Copeland bill would weaken present law, suggested in a substitute measure that all manufacturers of foods, drugs and cosmetics be required to apply to the Government for labels which would be pasted on all packages and containers.

White labels would indicate purity; blue, that the ingredients included narcotics or hypnotics, and red, that the product was poison.

Things as They Are

Devaluation Creates New National Problem Which Should Be Faced Resolutely.

By Samuel Crowther

WHEN, on January 31, 1934, the President revalued the dollar and when, on the next day, the Treasury announced that it stood ready to buy gold at $35 an ounce in the new dollars, as against the former price of $20.67 an ounce in the old dollars, the average citizen did not know what it was all about, but took for granted that someone in authority did know. He let it go at that.

The more serious students of money were aware that the Administration was acting on very sketchy premises and trusting to luck as to the consequences. But, at the time, anyone who questioned presidential infallibility got little for his pains. Now the consequences of the policy are becoming evident, and we may shortly find ourselves in a financial situation so grave as to shatter many of the prevailing delusions of grandeur.

The immediate reason for comment is that the report of the Department of Commerce shows that in the first six months of this year we imported gold in the amount of $804,163,000. During the year 1934 we imported gold in the amount of $1,217,000,000. In the space of 18 months we have imported gold in an amount exceeding $2,000,000,000.

* * * *

The function of gold in the world's economy is not all mysterious. The jargon of banking exists to cover up what is not known instead of to clarify what is known. Gold is simply a commodity of wide acceptance and because of that fact it has been convenient to make it a money base and to quote prices in terms of a weight of gold translated into dollars, pounds or francs. It is confusing to speak of the price of gold, for we are accustomed to speak of the prices of things in terms of money, and not of the price of money in terms of things.

When the Treasury offers to pay $35 an ounce for gold, it simply says that it will issue irredeemable paper money up to the amount of $35 in exchange for an ounce of gold. It is up to the holder of the gold to determine whether the purchasing power of his gold is worth more or less than the paper offered.

Gold has two important domestic monetary functions. It is first a standard of value and second a base for bank credit. A dollar in gold will, in this country, support about $10 in bank credit. The other great function of gold is to settle balances between countries.

In these settlements, gold is a commodity. When a nation goes off the gold standard, it says, in effect, that it has bought more than it can pay for in gold and therefore finds it necessary to make a composition with creditors. This composition is eventually effected by devaluation—that is, by paying in money of the same name as that in which the debt was contracted but of lesser value.

* * * *

The Administration devalued the dollar, not because our Nation was bankrupt, but as part of a fantastic scheme to raise commodity prices at home, while at the same time giving foreigners a discount with which to buy our goods. The only effect of devaluation to date has been to give to foreigners a discount of 40 per cent on the debts they owe us, but this is not important because it has not occurred to them to pay us.

The Treasury undertaking to buy all gold that comes into this country at $35 an ounce was part of an effort to keep the value of gold up—which means keeping the purchasing power of the dollar low and therefore keeping prices high. Gold at $35 an ounce is priced far above the world value of gold when translated into American securities.

In 1934 the entirety of our transactions with the world resulted in a balance owing to us of $381,000,000. We imported gold, silver and paper currency in the amount of $1,351,000,000, leaving a balance of specie imports and paper currency amounting to $970,000,000, which has no connection with any trade transaction. During the first six months of this year, our international account will apparently balance without the gold. Therefore the excess gold imports of last year and the imports of this year can be put down only to the Treasury offering a bonanza price for gold.

Attempts have been made to explain this influx of gold as being a repatriation by American citizens of funds that they placed abroad. The records show that no such amount of gold ever went abroad. The inescapable conclusion is that our Treasury, by the price it has fixed, is holding the bag for the world's output of gold and is also luring the gold out of the private hoards of Europe and the Orient.

There is, of course, no more reason why the United States should try to buy all the gold in the world at a high price than that it should try to buy all the wheat in the world at a high price—except that the wheat could be eaten. The Treasury, indeed, is burying part of the gold in a big hole—thus returning it to the earth from whence it came.

All of which means this:

(1) The inert, noninterest-bearing gold has been bought by obligations on which we must pay interest.

(2) The banking system is loaded with such an excess of reserves that, if an inflation ever begins, it will be uncontrollable.

(3) Once the buying stops—and the Treasury is nearing the end of its rope—gold will revalue to its world price and the Treasury, and therefore the country, will be in a position of any speculator that tried to corner a market and failed.

(4) In the meantime, the foreigners who sold the gold have used the proceeds, the records indicate, in part to buy back their own obligations and in part to buy American securities. The foreign interest in American coporations now certainly amounts to $7,000,000,000 and may be higher.

This is not a pleasant situation. But it is one to be faced and not dodged. It is being dodged.

Eight Proposals For Amending Basic Law Is Up

But No Action Is Likely on Plans to Change Constitution.

By the Associated Press.

Eight proposals for constitutional amendments to sanction social legislation reposed yesterday among 40 collecting dust in congressional pigeon-holes.

The proposed amendments—18 in the Senate and 22 in the House—were introduced at this session and buried in committees. No action is expected on them before adjournment.

The eighth came in for at least passing attention with Herbert Hoover's challenge to the Administration to make known the "specific words of the exact amendment" he contended it desires as a result of Supreme Court invalidation of New Deal legislation.

Keller Proposal.

The shortest, introduced June 7 by Representative Keller (Democrat), Illinois, reads:

"The Congress shall have power to make all laws which in its judgment shall be necessary to provide for the general welfare of the people."

Representative Wood (Democrat), Missouri, proposed that Congress be allowed to regulate "commerce, business, industry, finance, banking, insurance, manufacturers, transportation, agriculture and the production of natural resources," and that Congress be permitted to "delegate its legislative power to the President and/or to such agencies as he may select."

Conservative amendments proposed by Senator Costigan (Democrat), Colorado, and Representative Ford (Democrat), California, would given Congress the power to "regulate hours and conditions of labor and to establish minimum wages in any employment, and to regulate production, industry, business, trade and commerce to prevent unfair methods and practices therein."

Child-Labor Plan.

Representative Marcantonio (Republican), New York, proposed an amendment to permit Congress to prohibit child labor and take over almost any kind of business, "to be owned and operated by the Government for the benefit of the people."

Congress would have emergency powers to "regulate the production and marketing of any and all commodities," and prescribe wages and hours of labor under a proposal by Representative Kvale (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota.

Representative Dobbins (Democrat), Illinois, would empower Congress to provide for payment of old-age pensions, while Representative Crosser (Democrat), Ohio, would authorize Congress to "reduce the daliy period of time for which contracts of employment may be lawfully made."

Gen. Kilbourne Gets Texas Post

Gen. Gulick Is Transferred to the Philippines.

By the Associated Press.

The War Department yesterday assigned Maj. Gen. Charles E. Kilbourne, now commanding the harbor defenses of Manila and Subic bays in the Philippines, to take charge of the Second Division at Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

Brig. Gen. John W. Gulick, now commanding the Pacific sector of the Panama Canal Department, was assigned to command the Philippines bay defenses, succeeding Gen. Kilbourne. He will sail for Manila September 24.

Before going to Manila, Gen. Kilbourne served four years as assistant chief of staff in charge of war plans.

It was publication of his secret testimony before a House committee that impelled President Roosevelt recently to caution Congrss against giving out confidential military information. Kilbourne had testified that the Wilcox Air Base bill contained a camouflaged provision for an aviation base on the Canadian border. Kilbourne's new assignment closely followed his promotion from brigadier to major general.

Appropriations Voted This Year Top 8 Billions

Deficiency Bill Signed As Buchanan Talks of Balanced Budget.

By the Associated Press.

Total appropriations since Congress met on January 3 were boosted yesterday to $8,153,208,000 when President Roosevelt signed the second deficiency bill.

As the Chief Executive put his signature on that bill, two other significant things were happening: Chairman Buchanan (Democrat), Texas, of the House Appropriations Committee was talking about a "balanced budget" at the next session, and the last appropriation bill of the session—the third deficiency measure—was beginning to take shape.

The bill approved appropriates for many odds and ends, including $36,000,000 for the Tennessee Valley Authority. Normally, it would be the last appropriation bill of the session.

But a number of other things will be created by bills now in progress of enactment which will require money next year. Among them is the social security plan, now waiting the President's approval. It is estimated that will take $95,491,000 the first year of operation.

Additional money also is likely to be necessary for the new alcohol control administration, particularly if it is made an independent agency instead of being put under the Treasury.

Buchanan, looking over appropriations for the session, said in an interview that he felt expenditures could be brought within income next session.

He even went so far as to estimate that "we can scrape up $1,750,000,000 to $2,000,000,000 for relief" and still reach that objective.

Labor Opposes U. S. Forced Arbitrtaion

By the Associated Press.

John P. Frey, president of the metal trades department of the American Federation of Labor, said today his organization would oppose "anything in the nature of compulsory arbitration in Navy or other Government contracts."

He made this assertion on learning that bids opened by the Navy Department last week for new warships were invited on a compulsory arbitration basis.

All of the bidding companies "excepted" to the contract provision which would allow the Navy to set up a board of arbitration in event of labor trouble during construction of the ships. The Navy Department has not determined what its next step will be, officials said.

Submarginal Land Fund Called Snag to AAA Bill

Use of $50,000,000 to retire submarginal land from cultivation—now attached to the AAA bill—was reported as a snag to House and Senate conference agreement yesterday by Representative Ayres (Democrat), Montana.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, offered the amendment to circumvent a ruling by Comptroller General McCarl that no relief funds could be used for buying submarginal lands, Ayres said.

He added thousands of acres of land in the Rocky Mountain area now are under option.

Il Duce Scoffs At Selassie's Peace Gesture

500,000 Men Ordered to Mobilize for War Maneuvers.

The Italo-Ethiopian Crisis

Preparing for any eventualities, Premier Mussolini yesterday pushed mobilization of troops for maneuvers this month that will give him approximately 1,000,000 men in the field.

Emperor Haile Selassie, telling his crown council that Ethiopians are ready to defend themselves with their last drop of blood, denied that he had offered Italy land in exchange for an outlet to the sea.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Aug. 12.—Militant Italy pushed her mobilized forces close to the October goal of 1,000,000 manpower today as the Fascist press scoffed at Emperor Haile Selassie's already denied "offer" to exchange part of Ethiopia for an outlet to the sea.

Orders for moblization of a great army of 500,000 men for war games that will begin in northern Italy August 24 gave no date for the men to return to their homes. Thus, well-informed persons said, Italy would be able to strike with a maximum of power late in August at any developments in the dispute with the "Kings of Kings."

Alread 235,000 men are in Italy's East African colonies or are held in readiness. The gigantic war games are to center about the Brenner Pass area, it has been announced.

Reports from Paris attributing to the Ethiopian emperor an offer to cede part of Ogaden in exchange for an outlet to the sea (and denied officially at Addis Ababa today) brought from Il Lavoro Fascista the following comment:

"Apart from the fact that Italy wouldn't be satisfied with any such territory, who would cede the port mentioned? Certainly not Italy."

Meanwhile, it was announced that 12 ships either en route to Naples or already there have orders to load men and supplies for East Africa. The naval air carrier Miraglia also is to sail for Eritrea this week.

Italy's delegation to the tri-partite conferences between Italy, France and Great Britain prepared to depart for Paris, site of the conversations, but in informed circles there was a feeling that the "Stresa front" is in danger of collapse.

This refers to the accord between the three nations which was achieved at Stresa last spring in the face of German re-armament.

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Aug. 12.—Emperor Haile Selassie told his crown council in ringing tones today that Ethiopians are ready to take up their stand "in the mountains God gave them" and defend themselves with their last drop of blood.

Simultaneously his foreign ministry formally denied the "King of Kings" had offered to cede a part of Ethiopia to Italy in exchange for an outlet to the sea, as reported in Paris dispatches yesterday.

The emperor told the specially summoned council today that the world is on the brink of another great war and that Ethiopia "wants to see everything turn out peacefully."

"But failing that," he warned, "the Ethiopian people, with their emperor at their head, will defend themselves against the invader in their natural stronghold—the mountains God gave them!"

"We hope to see a peaceful solution," the emperor declared. "After the great war, constructive work for peace began, but now again there is the danger of a world war. I pray that God may give the grace and spirit of justice, equity and peace to the leaders of all the nations. But Ethiopia never will accept any belittlement of her independence or the prestige and sovereignty of her emperor."

He said his nation never wanted to hurt Italy's independence and prestige. Furthermore, the emperor added, Ethiopia has been "progressing and civilizing herself."

Referring to the danger of another world war, the ruler asserted "history is repeating itself in this crisis."

He reaffirmed his nation's faith in "great and powerful" Great Britain and France and said Ethiopia was ready to "collaborate loyally and frankly with all nations regardless of race or religion which collaborate loyally and frankly with Ethiopia."

As for the tripower conferences in Paris beginning this week, Selassie referred to them briefly as "the meetings to which we have not been invited."

May Be Parley Issue.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 12.—The question of giving Ethiopia an outlet to the sea may be raised at the tri-power conference on the Italo-Ethiopian despute in Paris this week, it was reported in informed British quarters today.

It was believed Italy would oppose inclusion of the matter in the formal program of the talks between Great Britain, France and Italy, but it may be discussed informally.

The question remained an intriguing one, since Premier Mussolini rejected an offer for cession of territory during the recent visit to Rome of Anthony Eden, Great Britain's minister for league affairs.

Hope for Peace Seen.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Aug. 12.—France saw a slender hope for peace today in Emperor Haile Selassie's reported willingness to cede part of Ethiopia to Italy.

Officials, however, said Premier Mussolini would not be satisfied with any such small offer as was reported in yesterday's Havas News Agency dispatches from Addis Ababa.

Nevertheless, the voluntary nature of the reported offer led to a belief that the King of Kings is a realist and might give much more to avoid war. Comment also was heard that Italy's reputed continued loss of gold and the increase in bank note circulation were indications of economic pressure that might make Il Duce more tractable.

Smuts Fears Ethiopian Row May Fire Race War in Africa

By the Associated Press.

Durban, Union of South Africa, Aug. 12.—The veteran South African general, Jan Christiaan Smuts, gave warning to the world today that an Italo-Ethiopian war may strike a spark which will explode the powder keg of relations between blacks and whites throughout Africa.

"I think it will shake the whole system of civilization to its foundations, should the League of Nations fail at this critical moment," Smuts told an interviewer.

The Boer War leader, now the Union's minister of finance, broke his government's official silence concerning war prospects when he said Italy's adventure in East Africa could not be looked upon as an isolated move, adding:

"It will create a serious position in Europe because of the repercussions in adjourning British territories and the intensification of black-against-white feeling."

Smuts expressed the opinion Italy is banking on the divergent views of France and England to prevent them from taking a strong position as intercederers.

He also predicted a long and costly war, in the event Mussolini attempts to storm the Ethiopian strongholds.

"Italy may overwhelm Abyssinia at the start with airplanes and poison gas," he said, "but it is one thing to overwhelm a country, another to occupy it."

Smuts indicated he views the possibility of Japanese support for Ethiopia seriously.

"We know," he said, "that Japan has been trying to get concessions in Abyssinia and we have no doubt there have been points of contact, which have not been disclosed."

Hostilities in Africa will not mean the end of the League of Nations, Smuts said, "because the League is our only peace machinery." He went on to say:

"Our danger is from dictators, who are in such straights everywhere that they are creating diversions by launching out on foreign adventures of this kind. The League can not possibly apply economic sanctions unless there is unanimity of the great powers and unless countries not in the League, like the United States and Germany, fall in line."

London, Aug. 12 (AP).—Informed quarters regarded today the statement by Gen. Jan Christian Smuts at Durban as strong and timely dominion support for British efforts to prevent an Italo-Ethiopian war. His comments found warm support here.

House is Adjourned As Tribute to Truax

By the Associated Press.

Out of respect to Charles V. Truax, the House adjourned yesterday after hearing expressions of tribute and praise for the services o fthe late Democratic member at large from Ohio, who died suddenly Friday at his apartment here.

Speaker Byrns designated Representatives Sweeney, Fletcher, Young and Jess, of Ohio, to represent the House at funeral services.

Members were advised officially of Truax's death by Representative Duffey, of Ohio, who extolled his sincerity and "arduous and valiant" work in "the interests of the common people, the farmers and labor."

Hero Medal Asked For Army Airman

Cadet Praised for Staying With Burning Plane.

By the Associated Press.

March Field, Riverside, Calif., Aug. 12.—Flying Cadet Francis H. McDuff has been recommended for the distinguished flying cross for his heroism June 22 in staying with a burning Douglas observation plane until two passengers had jumped to safety.

The recommendation announced today by Brig. Gen. Henry H. Arnold recounted that the young pilot held the flaming plane in a slow glide until Capt. Richard I. Dugan, acting as observer, and Sergt. John L. Gyles had extricated themselves and made parachute leaps.

By the time Cadet McDuff was able to jump, the plane was so low he struck the ground in the first opening swing of his 'chute. He was uninjured. The plane, then a mass of flames, crashed into a mountainside near Banning, Calif.

Cadet McDuff and his companions are members of the Eighty-eighth Observation Squadron, Brooks Field, Tex.

AAA Outlines Aid For Sirup Trade

Control Program Due to Add $2,500,000

By the Associated Press.

Outlines of a production control program, which officials said would add approximately $2,500,000 in two years to the incomes of commercial producers for sugar cane for sirup were made public yesterday by the AAA.

Under the program, the AAA announcement said approximately $1,500,000 will be paid as benefits on the 1934 crop and the remainder on the 1935 crop.

Contracts will be offered to growers as soon as they have been approved, it was stated.

Officials expressed expectation that 70,000 farmers who produce sugar cane for sirup on a commercial basis in Louisiana, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and South Carolina will sign. The first benefit payments will be made when compliance certificates are approved, it was said.

Cubans Listen As Roosevelt Lauds Treaties

Island Leaders, President Ascribe Trade Gains to New Policy.

By the Associated Press.

Congratulating a group of Cuban business men yesterday on improved economic conditions in the island, President Roosevelt attributed them in part to the "good neighbor" policy between Cuba and the United States.

Dr. Guillermo Patterson, the Cuban Ambassador, and Jose Casanova, president of the Social and Economic Union of Cuba, likewise attributed gains to the friendly relations between the two countries and more particularly to their trade agreement.

Speaking extemporaneously to the group gathered in his office, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"I am not only gratified but very much touched at your coming here.

"It is a splendid thing for you to do, and it proves that something we have always wanted has worked out.

"One has an ideal and wants to put it into effect. We tried two and a half years ago to establish a principle—the principle that two nations, side by side, ought to be good neighbors. The next thing we did was to try to work out some practical demonstration of the value of the policy of the good neighbor.

"People said a trade agreement would not accomplish anything; that a trade agreement would not work, but we put it through. The proof of the pudding is in the eating.

"Some day I'm not only coming to Havana, but I am going into the interior of the country. I used to know it in the old days, 20 years ago."

Chairman Jones Hits New Farmers' Group

Chairman Jones of the House Agricultural Committee yesterday criticized the new organization known as the "Farmers Independent Council of America."

The slogan of that group, he said, is that the farmer should be left alone—"another fallacy."

"That is just it," his statement added. "The farmer hasn't been left alone.

"If there had been no trade barriers, no monopolies, no group legislation, and no tariffs, the farmer would have needed no legislation.

Boston House Reproves Nazis On Persecution

The conference dealt chiefly with Nazi plans to force the Steel Helmets to dissolve and agree to their absorption in a general veterans' organization controlled by an army officer or a high Nazi.

Authorities at Gronau in the Rhineland dissolved the local Stahlem post because of "activities against the state."

Anti-Semitic demonstrations spread to Poland when at Kattowice several Jews were beaten for attempting to remove anti-Jewish placards from walls. Several Jewish shopfronts were smeared and windows were broken. Police dispersed demonstrators.

At Hamburg authorities arrested the Jewish brothers, Hermann and Manfred Bauer and the Jewish clerk of a local bank, Oskar Fisher, on charges of smuggling 20,000 marks ($8,090) in foreign exchange. The money was confiscated.

At Gladbeck, Westphalia, a woman was sentenced to five months in prison for removing anti-Catholic posters from walls. The sentence was severe, the court said, because it was her second offense. The woman's assistant, a youth, received a three weeks' sentence.

Viktor Lutze, head of the Nazi Storm Troops, revealed a campaign to eliminate undesirables from the party's own army. In an interview with the Preussische Zeitung at Koenigsberg he announced elimination from the Storm Troops of all individuals deemed unsatisfactory in behavior in order that only "fighters for ideals" will remain.

"The Storm Troops will be made perfect so as to be able to resist attacks from whatever side they may come," Lutze said. "A general reorganization of the Storm Troops has been concluded. We lost in volume but we gained in quality and coherence."

Japanese Army Chief Is Killed By Subordinate

General Nagata Sabered in His Room in Argument; Shake-up Blamed.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Aug. 12.—Japan's director of military affairs, Lieut. Gen. Tetsuzan Nagata, was slain by a saber thrust from a subordinate officer today and military authorities immediately planned steps to cope with any reverberations.

Lieut. Col. Aizawa, who, the war office stated, killed Nagata during an argument in the latter's rooms, was arrested. Immediately the minister and vice minister of war and other high army officials met to discuss the situation.

Although authorities were reticent, it was believed the quarrel resulted from discontent among officers following the recent ouster of Gen. Jinzaburo Malaki as director general of military education.

This ouster made the 52-year-old Nagata virtual administrative head of the army and was accompanied by a shake-up among divisional commanders and other high officers.

Gen. Senjuro Hayashi the minister of war, was reported to have offered to resign and assume responsibility for events leading up to today's killing. It was considered doubtful, however, that the resignation would be accepted.

Nagata, regarded as one of the most able army men in Japan, was a strong supporter of the war minister, and it was Hayashi's faction that succeeded in ousting Nazaki.

Col. Niimi was reporting to Gen. Nagata on gendarmerie affairs when Col. Aizawa arrived at Nagata's rooms. Aizawa, an accomplished fencer, attacked Nagata and Col. Niimi was seriously woulded in attempting to protect his superior officer.

Gen. Nagata die dof a wound in the chest.

Lemke Says Farm Bill Is Constitutional Now

Representative Lemke (Republican), Maryland, told the House Judiciary Committee yesterday his new farm mortgage moratorium bill had been phrased to meet all objections raised by the Supreme Court, when it held the original act unconstitutional.

Lemke explained in detail to the shirt-sleeved committee how the measure, and a similar one for relief of small business firms and city home owners, had been written with careful attention to constitutionality. He said the courts had been granted much more discretion than in the invalidated act. Lemke said he expected both measures to pass the Senate in the next few days.

Baltimore Step To Aid Mooney Opens in Row

Prisoner's Lawyers Object to Procedure to Take Perjury Testimony.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 12.—Steps were taken here today to place before the California Supreme Court a deposition of John McDonald that he perjured himself when he gave testimony that helped to send Tom Mooney to prison for life for the 1916 Preparedness Day bombings in San Francisco.

A preliminary session was held by A. E. Shaw, of San Francisco, referee for the Supreme Court, at a Baltimore hospital where McDonald, now 63 years old, is confined by a chronic illness that has left him partly paralyzed. Tomorrow was set for the actual taking of the deposition.

Written into the record was a vigorous objection from attorneys for Mooney that the State Supreme Court had attempted to make the proceedings here a part of a hearing before it and that it had authorized the referee to pass upon the admissibility of evidence.

The attorneys, John F. Finerty, of Washington, and George T. Davis, of San Francisco, charged the court had violated the statutes of California in the matter.

Their contentions, along with the deposition, will be placed before the court for consideration in a habeas corpus petition of Mooney for freedom.

McDonald, formerly an itinerant waiter and circus performer, purportedy has repudiated the damaging testimony he gave against Mooney and Warren K. Billings at their trial for the Preparedness Day outrage. Various efforts have been made to get his testimony formally before the courts of California.

Mooney's habeas corpus plea is the latest move in his 19-year fight for liberty. It first was made to the United States Supreme Court, which directed a remedy should be sought in the State court.

May Be Crazy, But Philatelists RemainBlissful

Collectors' Dean Says Perhaps Glass Knows; Session on Today.

Stamp collectors, gathered here from every State for the fiftieth annual convention of the American Philatelic Society, are virtually a race apart, according to members in the organization as well as persons outside it.

Senator Carter Glass is convinced all philatelists are not quite sane and refuses to have anything to do with the whole busiess, although his two sons, Carter, jr., and Powell, are ardent collectors.

A. H. Wilhelm, of San Francisco, who began chasing stamps 56 years ago and hasn't missed a convention in 10 years, admitted yesterday at the convention's headquarters in the Carlton Hotel that "we philatelists seem pretty queer to people who have never collected."

"Crazy," Says Glass.

The fiery Democratic Senator from Virginia uses stronger words than "pretty queer" in giving his opinion of stamp gatherers.

"He says we're all crazy," laughed Carter Glass, jr., editor of the Lynchburg News and vice president of the American Philatelic Society. "I started my collection a good many years ago, when I was about 8, but I never had any co-operation from my father. He thought the idea was crazy then and he think's it's crazy now."

Wilhelm could understand Senator Glass' point of view.

"It's always hard," sai dthe veteran collector from San Francisco, "for persons to understand how hard-headed business men can spend time and money on stamps. Well, when my business interferes with my collecting I shove the business aside. That's how fascinating stamps are to me."

Wilhelm is a contractor. The The friendships he has made through collecting are almost as satisfying as the stamp albums themselves, he said.

About 200 members of the American Philatelic Society registered at the convention's headquarters yesterday. More are expected today.

Results of the balloting for new officers, carried on entirely by mail, are to be announced this morning at the first official business session. Yesterday the election for the presidency was rather generally conceded to Eugene Klein of Philadelphia, now international secretary. Klein's wife and two daughters who accompanied him to Washington are also serious collectors.

The convention was formally opened with a reception last night in the foyer, which has been on Museum, given by the Washington chapter for the visiting members of the society. This same event also served as the formal opening of the golden jubilee philatelic exhibition in the fyer, which has been on public display for more than a week.

Ickes Speaks Today.

At the business meeting this morning Howard F. Clark, assistant engineer commissioner, will give the address of welcome. Secretary of the Interior Ickes, a collector of note, will give the formal address.

A report on the progress of the "illustrations bill," which the society has had before Congress for at least ten years, will be made at the convention.

Other business will deal with the proposed establishment of a national headquarters in Washington, punitive measures against counterfeiters and the choice of next year's convention city. Omaha, thus far, has made the strongest bid.

The Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., will tender a reception to visiting members of the society and the American Air Mail Society at its meeting tonight at the Thomson School.

Man Hangs Self to High Tree, Firemen Called, Cut Him Down

Joking Crowd Gathers to See Final Drama for Prince George Man.

Two hundred persons—some of them women with babies in their arms—stood in a little moonlit valley last night and joked as firemen cut down the self-hanged body of Roland Barker.

Firemen had to do it because Barker had performed his suicide so well—had hanged himself so efficiently—that police coul dnot reach his body, swinging 15 feet above the ground from a limb 30 feet up.

Barker, 46, was a former Navy Yard machinist. He lived with his wife, Alice, and their 4-year-old daughter, Estelle, on his farm, a mile beyond the District line in Prince Georges County, near the intersection of Southern avenue and Wheeler road.

Arthur Beach, a colored tenant of the farm, found him hanging in the little valley formed by Henson's Branch, near his home, his wife's clothesline knotted securely around the limb and a knot tied under his ear. His kneck was broken. He had been hanging many hours.

Beach raced to the nearby road, terrified, and told a passing motorist, who informed Eleventh Precince police in Washington, who, in turn, notified Prince Georges police.

Barber must have climbed the 30-foot tree trunk with the rope in his hand and, sitting on the high limb alone in the woods, knotted the rope to the tree and himself. Then he slid off the limb.

He was found at 7:45 p. m. Police could devise no way of getting the body down. The limb was too high. Barker's feet were too high from the ground. They called the Oxon Hill Fire, Department.

The firemen propped a tall ladder against the tree, climbed to the high limb and gently eased the body to within 3 feet of the tarpaulin held by volunteers on the ground. Then the doubled and redoubled rope would reach no further. They had to drop the body into the tarpaulin. It bounced. Rigor mortis had set in.

Meanwhile men, women and children had gathered from miles around to watch. They talked lightly, laughed and joked. A few of the more tender-hearted thought it was 'pathetic," but it didn't seem to upset anyone much.

Mrs. Barker was grief-stricken. She told police her husband was despondent because he had been unable to find a job, although there was no question of want in the family.

Last March 13, she said, he was brought home from the Perry Point Hospital, near Baltimore, where he had spent a year for a nervous disorder. She said he had never appeared to be really normal mentally since.

He left the house at 6 o'clock yesterday morning, she said, without saying "good-bye" to her or to Estelle. She had heard nothing from or of him until police told her he had hanged himself.

Italian Legation Stoned By Ethiopia's Backers

London, Aug. 12 (AP).—The Reuters (British) News Agency reported from Madrid today that the Italian Legation at Lisbon was stoned and windows broken by sympathizers of Ethiopia in that country's threatened war with Italy.

An automobile halted momentarily in front of the legation, it was reported, and stones wrapped in leaflets saying "Leave Poor Ethiopia Alone" and "Down With Fiscism" were thrown against the building. Soldiers were sent to guard the legation.

'Treasure Hunt' To Grand Jury, Perhaps Today

Arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage in a test case of the "Grand National Treasure Hunt," Albert Reiss and Philip Schoenberg, arrested in a raid in the 1400 block of I street northwest last Saturday, were held under $2,000 bond each for hearing August 21.

Before the pair appeared before the commisioner, Maj. Thomas G. Lamphier, veteran aviator of the World War, denied either had any connection with the National Conference for Legalizing Lotteries, of which he is a member and of which Mrs. Oliver Grace Harriman, New York socialite, is a backer.. Mrs. Harriman's name had been printed on the door of the I street office Reiss and Schoenberg operated.

"Just Ticket Sellers."

"These men are just ticket sellers," said Maj. Lamphier, who appeared at Turnage's office for the express purpose of "clearing the atmosphere regarding Mrs. Harriman."

"I appeared here primarily to straighten this matter out," asserted Maj. Lamphier.

"The National Conference for Legaliznig Lotteries has no Washington office and no Washington representatives.

Quick Action Planned.

After Commissioner Turnage had held the defendants, it was learned through the office of District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett that the case might be given to the grand jury sometime today or tomorrow in an effort to determine quickly its status.

In defense of the so-called "legal lottery" scheme, Alfred Levy, an attorney, went to the support of Reiss and Schoenberg.

He said they had been given tickets on consignment, but that they were not duly accredited agents of the "treasure hunt."

Drawing Denied.

He added that participants must buy $1 tickets to the Grand View Amusement Park, Singac, N. J. These entitled them to select "correct titles," to eight cartoons, furnished in a small booklet.

"There is no drawing involved," Levy concluded.

Lieut. George M. Little, head of the vice squad of the Metropolitan Police Department, said he expected the case of Schoenberg and Reiss would be heard by the grand jury this morning.

McCordr Given Backing As Appeals Court Judge

By the Associated Press.

Senators Black and Bankhead, of Alabama, announced jointly yesterday they were recommending Leon McCord, Alabama Democratic national committeeman, for appointment as judge of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, succeeding the late Judge Nathan T. Bryan, of Florida.

The circuit comprises Southeastern States. McCord, whose home is in Montgomery, was a former Alabama circuit court judge. He left the bench last year to run for Governor, but was defeated.

possible the issue will be taken to the people. His statement was made following a meeting of the committee. Another session is scheduled for today.

Seven sections of the measure which were in controversy have been agreed upon, but this does not include the "death sentence" and several other controversial provisions.

While the committee continued its debate, Philip H. Gadsden, chairman of the committee of public utility executives, challenged the Administration to take the power issue to the country. Wheeler replied that if this is done the utilities "will be licked in every State in the union."

Gadsden replied that 10,000,000 citizens, including utility stockholders and voting members of their families, will appreciate an opportunity to express their views.

Senator Black, chairman of the Senate lobby investigating committee, announced his committee would resume public hearings today. Witnesses will include T. Justice Moore, Richmond, Va.; M. J. McCruden, Philadelphia; Duncan Robertson, New York, and representatives of Sullivan & Cromwell and of Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett, both New York concerns.

The Choice Ahead.

By agreeing to strike out the La Follette amendment providing for lower income-tax exemptions and increased surtaxes in the lower brackets, the Finance Committee has eliminated the one feature of the Senate bill which shows any evidence of constructive thinking. What is worse, judged from the standpoint of national welfare, the action taken greatly increases the chances that the House and Senate will be able to compose their differences in conference and have some sort of hodgepodge bill ready for the President's signature before adjournment.

Although Congress is refusing to acknowledge the hard fact that needed revenues can only be secured by heavy taxation on all classes, the issue presented can not be long ignored. Senator La Follette has sounded the warning in saying that "we have reached a point where the taxpayers must decide whether they are willing to pay more than at present or have uncontrolled inflation."

Congress and the Administration may at this time weakly refuse to choose between a politically unpopular form of taxation and an immediately easier but economically much more oppressive means of escaping direct taxation. Ultimately, however, it will either have to choose or the choice will be made for it, to the injury of those very classes whom it now refuses to tax.

Moscow At 75.

Edward A. Filene is ill in Moscow. The Boston merchant, now in his seventy-fifth year, has been stricken by pneumonia in the midst of one of his many foreign tours. It is quite in keeping with his mode of life that, at an age when most men would be found close to their hearth-stones, Edward Filene is far afield, eagerly pursuing his study of social and economic problems.

It is well known how he and his brother built their father's department store into a landmark of American mercantile enterprise, startling the commercial world by inviting its employes to share in the executive management of the firm through representation on the board of directors. But Mr. Filene's intellectual interests could not be confined to merchandising. Learning of credit unions in his early European travels, he became a champion of co-operative banking in this country, inspiring the establishment of many a People's Bank, particularly in the Northeast.

A stanch advocate of the League of Nations, he organized the International Management Institute in Geneva. Among other interests he founded the Twentieth Century Fund for economic, industrial, civic and educational improvements, and invented the multi-lingual translating device used at most international assemblies. Writer, speaker, benefactor and student (albeit he had no more than a high-school education for formal schooling), Edward A. Filene is an exemplar of the American creed that the full life, the active life, the life of initiative and imagination is the best life.

May his promised recovery be speedy! The world can ill afford to lose men who thus combine individual initiative with a strong sense of social responsibility.

An Encouraging Example.

At one time the announcement that a large industrial corporation, such as General Motors, planned to spend $50,000,000 in improving and expanding plant and industrial equipment would have attracted little public notice. Today the information is front page news, and rightly so.

To understand the importance of this venture it is only necessary to look at the records of new financing during this so-called era of "recovery." The Securities and Exchange Commission recently pointed out that the amount raised for plant and equipment during the first six months of the year was only $22,000,000—less than half the sum General Motors expects to spend. Furthermore, the volume of new corporate issues offered for other than refunding purposes reached just $155,600,000 during the first seven months of 1935.

The fact that the management of General Motors believes that the outlook warrants an expenditure of such size is itself a hopeful augury of business improvement. One of the major deterrents to a revival of the demand for capital goods has been lack of confidence, not an absence of openings for the profitable utilization of new capital. While one large corporate issue can not work miracles, it should have a stimulative effect upon other business concerns that are considering an expansion of operations. In other words, confidence begets confidence, and business expansion, by making more business, helps to justify that confidence.

National Wealth And Income.

According to estimates of the Department of Commerce, our national income, paid out in the form of salaries, wages, dividends, interest, profits, rents and royalties, amounted to $49,440,000,000 in 1934—an increase of $5,000,000,000 over the preceding year, but a total still 37 per cent below the figure for 1929. The amount of income produced, estimated by adding savings and subtracting business losses from income paid out, is placed at approximately $47,000,000,000 in 1934—an increase of from $6,000,000,000 to $7,000,000,000 over 1933.

Of course statistics of this sort throw little, if any, light upon changes in the current production of real wealth from year to year. In this country, for instance, declines in the price level exaggerated the severity of our real income losses during the period from 1929 to 1933, while thereafter rapidly rising prices overemphasized the extent of the subsequent gains. Thus, the drop of 42 per cent in monetary income between 1929 and 1933 was offset to a considerable extent by a concurrent decrease of 31 per cent in wholesale prices.

It is impossible to determine how far the better income showing of 1934 is due to the pronounced rise in prices which occurred during the preceding year and how far it represents an actual increase in the volume of produced goods. Some light is thrown on this question, however, by the production indices of the Federal Reserve Board and the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. The former shows an increase of about 4 per cent in industrial output as compared with 1933, while the latter reveals a decline of 6 per cent in the volume of agricultural production.

It is interesting to note that during the year wages in certain industries for which data could be obtained rose 24 per cent, far outstripping the rate of increase in industrial output. The contrast between changes in monetary and in real income is even more startling in the case of agriculture. Here, in face of falling output, a 10 per cent increase in monetary income paid was achieved.

Apparently, a good part of the gains in monetary income during the past year has been due to changes in the purchasing power of the dollar and to Government payments which in many cases helped to reduce the volume of actual output. Nevertheless, a more detailed analysis of the income data shows a better adjustment of agricultural to manufacturing income. It is also noticeable that the proportion of income paid out in the form of dividends shows a much greater percentage decline as compared with 1929 than does wages, despite an advance of 13 per cent in 1934 dividends over 1933. This development is a refutation of the contention that labor is still suffering from diversion of an undue proportion of national income to investor and creditor groups.

These income relationships, rather than composite figures, are the ones which call for study and interpretation. With prices more stable and with less emphasis placed upon the importance of raising them, we have come to realize that the extent and reality of business improvement has to be tested by productive activity measured in terms of physical output. That in turn is affected favorably or unfavorably by the manner in which the national income is distributed among various classes of producers and consumers.

Tread Lightly, Comrade.

A comrade by the name of Hoppner urged delegates of the Third Internationale, now meeting in Moscow, to appeal to the intelligentsia of the world for co-operation with the proletariat. "The time has come," he declared, "when the intelligentsia must make a clear choice between Fascism and Communism," and added, somewhat mournfully, that to date only a minority of the intelligentsia has turned to the Left, thus necessitating "intensive work" among them.

If the comrade is wise he will think twice before starting zealous proselytization among the intelligentsia. There is more than one way to skin a cat and not all of them call for "intensive work." The fact is that there is probably a higher proportion of Leftism among the intelligentsia today than in any other given group. It may not be a brand pure enough to suit Comrade Hoppner, but if he would not lose what already exists, he will abstain from any too strenuous missionizing.

Nothing is more deflationary to the radicalism of most of the intelligentsia than actual contact with urgent energumens. Or, to paraphrase a famous British sociologist, the chief trouble with Communism is the Communists.

Between The Acts.

For some time the critics have been holding a wake for the theater. George Jean Nathan is, of course, the chief mourner by reason of seniority. In fact, he has lit so many candles for the histrionic dead that his requiems are beginning to verge on the professional. It is becoming more and more apparent that his tears are glycerin. And though there is still a long and admiring cortege following every Nathan theatrical interment, up to now Broadway has consistently refused to don permanent widow's weeds. This stubbornness, perhaps, hinges more on an absence of corpus delicti than on lack of circumstantial evidence.

But at last producers and actors are beginning to admit that the patient does look sickly and decidedly lacking in red blood. A "consultation" was recently held by the Municipal Art Committee, the League of New York Theaters and the Actors Equity Association. Here it was agreed with Mr. Nathan that the pulse of the theater is undoubtedly spotty. But the diagnosticians maintained that the patient's heart is still in the right place and that only a strong stimulant is needed. Accordingly, they have presented their findings to the Legislature and Board of Aldermen and suggest, among other things, that bars in the continental manner be installed in theater lobbies.

This feature of the petition would put us on a par with European theatergoers, who have long enjoyed the camaraderie of beverages between the acts. If further precedent were needed, it may be found on home soil in the case of the Metropolitan Opera House. In our theaters, we have long since abandoned heavy plush backdrops and way-down-East melodramas of papier mache durability. Sandwiches and beer would be a further healthy indication that the American theater is at last growing up and cutting its wisdom teeth. And for some of our plays such fortification of the inner man is, from the humanitarian viewpoint, highly desirable.

More Deadly Than The Male.

Most men will at least be interested in the findings of the Alimony Reform League of New York, which asserts that women who have their former husbands jailed for alimony arrears are psychopathic cases of a particularly vicious character.

The league has concluded a questionnaire survey among militant former wives whose former mates, for one reason or another, were derelict in paying up on schedule and are now behind bars. Most of the replies insisted the men deserved to be jailed. When reminded that in durance vile their former bridegrooms were only handicapped in meeting court stipulations, a majority of the women admitted they could "get along" without the money but wanted the erring spouses penalized just the same.

Indeed, one woman, answering the questionnaire, forgot all about finances to plunge in zoological detail: "My husband had the grace of a hippopotamus, the brain of a gnat, looked like a giraffe, stung like a wasp and had the personality of a dead salmon." Doubtless this unrestrained description assisted the league's deliberate finding that many former wives are victims of "some sort of psychosis, bordering on sadism," and have a "persecution mania."

The survey also observes that men locked up through inability, or unwillingness, to support their divorced wives themselves suffer permanent ill effects from the incarceration. Jailing most men, it is reminded, damages their self-respect, disrupts their morale, and handicaps them irremediably in afterlife. Some, it is stated, "never again reached one-half of their efficiency after they were released."

The survey report does not touch upon the propriety or necessity for alimony per se. It deals only with exacting penalties for nonpayment and the apparent emotional factors of insistent women. But if, as stated, half the women who answered were willing for their former husbands to remain in cells "until they rot," even though money payments thus were definitely made impossible, the report at least indicates why many a brave man has a qualm or two before the altar.

A Restaurant Tip.

It is said that the best prepared food is always to be found around the wholesale and financial districts of a city. The reason for this is that men, who form the bulk of traders there, are much more finicky about what they eat than are women. Luncheon, to the latter, too often means a salad and iced tea. To a man it's a leisurely opportunity to expound his views and theories or to further complicated business deals. Many a prospective buyer's pocketbook is reached through his stomach with steak or lobster as an entree.

There are few real gourmets left. But as a rule, men know very definitely what they like to eat and how they like it cooked. That is an old masculine proclivity which women have been more or less inclined to humor. But it is not so well known that men consider important not only what and how they are served, but by whom. Paul Henkle, of New York, president of the Society of Restaurateurs, says that the true art of dining declined with the advent of waitresses. This invasion he blames on the World War, when vacancies had to be filled by women. He feels, however, that with the repeal of prohibition, dining in the old legal manner is coming into its own again and that this form of service with a capital S can only be given by men.

Mr. Henkle may be unnecessarily prejudiced in his attitude. The gender of a waiter makes very little difference so far as definition is concerned. One is simply "a man who waits at table" and the feminine counterpart is "a female waiter at table." Even the feminists would be hard put to coin a more impartial distinction than that. This appears to be more a tempest in a teashop than anything else. Mr. Henkle's line of reasoning will undoubtedly have a certain following among the gastronomically elite. But the wise restaurateur will continue to be the one who makes sure that it is not the customer who is the waiter.

"Russian aviators," says a newspaper headline, "forced back by engine trouble." And something of the same kind seems to have been slowing down the Russian agitators.

Freezing The Unemployed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It may be of interest to your readers to learn that the "freezing death" experiments of Dr. Willard of Los Angeles, are not a new thing by any means. In the spring of 1932 the scientific world was startled by the proposal of Dr. Daehtaf, of Berlin. The learned German also had succeeded in causing suspended animation in animals and humans by a so-called "freezing" process along the lines carried on by our Dr. Williard.

But the novelty of the herr doctor's experiments was his honest and sober offer to put the unemployed of the Fatherland under the spell of his painless "frosty death"—to lie by the thousands in properly constructed shelves in gigantic storage houses. This idea was discussed both in the German press and in the newspapers of Toronto and Montreal, Canada, about that time, it being through Canada that I understand knowledge of the proposals leaked out.

The German government of that day did not adopt Prof. Daehtaf's scheme, evidently considering that their army of unemployed was quite a temporary one, with no reason for "putting them on ice." But the writer still sincerely believes that to do as the Berlin doctor suggested—that is, to cause a painless suspended animation to what is, after all, a temporary unused commodity—would be a sensible, a courageous, and a Christian way of dealing with a problem which threatens to cause havoc in our national existence.

On Musical Criticism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I was interested to read in The Post of August 10 that criticism of "Musician's" of Mr. Carter's attack on Mr. Rudolf Ganz and the National Symphony Orchestra. While the attack in itself was crude, yet I think that there are elements of truth in his remarks.

Mr. Carter has evidently an untrained mind when it comes to expressing his thoughts; but anyone who feels so strongly about Bach or Mozart must have a strong sense of music. I think that nowadays good music is taken too lightly, and "Musician" should discount the crudities and look for what is hidden between the lines. I have no way of judging Mr. Carter's age, but I suggest that he is fairly young; and you can trust young men of spirit to crusade for a cause no matter how hopeless.

My suggestion to Mr. Carter would be to study more and write less for public use until he has attained the power of co-ordinating his thoughts; and my suggestion to "Musician" would be to be thankful that the young men of our country are awakening to music to the extent that Mr. Carter is.

Mr. Dickstein's Proposal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have read with interest about the joint resolution introduced in Congress by Representative Dickstein, of New York, which would bar from the mails "any papers, pamphlets, books and writings adapted or intended to cause racial or religious hatred, bigotry or intolerance." No doubt this bill was introduced with the best intentions to curb Nazi and other alien propaganda in this country, but it seems to me to seriously threaten the freedom of the press and of scientific study.

History has shown that one of the best ways to keep burning the fires of racial and religious hatreds is to attempt to suppress free expression of opinion.

Perhaps the man does not live who does not have some racial and religious prejudices, and these prejudices should be acknowledged, understood and allowance made for them. When the attitudes of mind are openly expressed they may be freely discussed and the truth of the situation arrived at. But if we drive these opinions under cover the truth is perverted, and when the prejudices do break out they may be accomplished by violence.

The founders of this Nation considered religion as a personal matter between the individual and his God. But when one individual or organization tells a person how he must seek his salvation, it ceases to be religion and becomes government. This confusion between government and religion is responsible for a great deal of the so-called religious friction. The government of a country sets certain restrictions on moral activity which are for the best interests of the common weal, otherwise morality and faith, which are considered the essentials of religion, are entirely a matter for the individual to settle for himself, and he does not need any other individual or organization to solve his religious problems for him.

If we would get back to the sound ideas on race and religion which the founders of this Nation entertained, there would be no reason whatsoever for the consideration of such bills so alien to American life as the one introduced by Representative Dickstein.

On The Wisdom Of Saloman

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

With great surprise, I read a letter in The Post this morning, bearing the name of a Mr. Saloman, which criticized in a very severe manner the quality and nature of the editorials currently appearing in your paper. While not seeking any publicity whatever, I would like to state that this gentleman's opinion is not shared by all of your readers.

I lived in Louisville many years ago, when Mr. Henry Watterson was in his prime; I lived in Richmond while Dr. Douglas Freeman was making his reputation as an editor; I lived in St. Louis 30-odd years ago and read the editorials of the Republic, the Globe-Democrat and the Star, and I am currently reading the screeds of the Washington Evening Star, the Herald and the Alexandria Gazette. Besides these, I am familiar with the output of the current incumbents of the Baltimore Sun, the Philadelphia Inquirer and the New York Times. My personal opinion is that you do not suffer in comparison with any of these gentlemen.

There are times in life when it is necessary to say things of a critical nature, but seldom times when it is necessary to be deliberately unkind or unfair. If, for any reason, any of your readers does not like what you write, he has a very obvious remedy. But to send such a communication, which might easily result in injuring one's standing with an employer, or have some other hurtful effect, while not possibly having any helpful influence, is, to my way of thinking, cruelly unjust. JOHN B. ABRAHAM.
Alexandria, Va., Aug. 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

This morning after reading The Post editorials I was thinking of what a change good subjects sensibly written make in a newspaper. After 30 years' perusal of The Post, it is only of late that the editorials have attracted my attention sufficiently to cause me to finish an article.

It is barely possible that Mr. Saloman is pro-Roosevelt, right or wrong, and some of your timely criticism brought out the old antagonistic spirit, or perhaps he is not interested in current events.

Well, everybody must be pleased, so from now on you had better write on the growth of wild flowers, the heat wave, the styles in summer B. V. D.'s or other vital questions.

Although I am not scholastic, it singes me considerably when I am told that my judgment in reading is poor and even though I may be ignorant I still insist that I like to read your columns. G. R. S.
Washington, Aug. 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have been puzzled by a letter from one Samuel Saloman, which you printed on August 10, asserting that the standard of The Post editorial page has fallen during the present management of the paper. I assume the man is trying to be funny.

Anyone with the brains of a jackrabbit knows that up to two years ago the editorial page of The Post was largely garbage. In this relatively short period it has been transformed into one of the most distinguished and thought-provoking pages of suggestive comment to be found in any American newspaper, and in this connection I know whereof I speak.

If The Post were not a paper of such high standards I would guess that there is no Samuel Saloman and that you faked his letter to get a quick reader reaction. But knowing your ethics, I also know Mr. Saloman must exist as one of those we are told to "suffer gladly."
R. F. B.
Washington, Aug. 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

This writer reads your editorials daily and considers himself competent to form a correct opinion as to their merit. They are always very good on the many subjects discussed.

A letter which appeared in your issue of August 10, and signed Samuel Saloman, is so far from being correct that we can only attribute it to being one of the products of the intense heat we have recently experienced. I think The Post is too generous in permitting such conspicuous nonsense to reach the public. There should be a limit to this. R. LAPPIN.

The Post Impressionist

Introducing Able Miss Cain

Post Office, Tuesday.

"AT LEAST," remarked Oscar Wilde, many years gone, "I have had the supreme satisfaction of hearing my own poetry recited by a golden voice."

The voice he referred to was Sara Bernhardt's.

He addressed Miss E. W. Cain.

* * *

Wilde was talking about the Lord Chamberlain's ban against "Salome" on the eve of production. Most critics considered that the theatre-going public lost nothing by the ban.

Masefield, however, was talking about a telephone-operator.

* * *

When the cables failed to transmit complete details of England's Golden Voice Competition, we eagerly awaited the arrival of the English newspapers chronicling that event. They're here at last—but they leave much to be desired.

* * *

The contest was sponsored by the Post Office Department of Britain's government, which runs the telephone system of the United Kingdom. The general aim was to improve the enunciation of telephone operators—to make them what Babbitt would have called (and what England did call) "voice-conscious." The specific purpose was to find that operator among the 15,000 exchanges whose enunciation and voice "led all the rest."

* * *

Except that form and features, hair and complexion, were not considered, the thing seems to have been run like a National Beauty Contest—and to have excited the local rivalries which such contests excite. There were scores of preliminary canters and semi-finals throughout the island, until the candidates were reduced to the Muses' ultimate number: 9.

These three trios then came to the King George V Hall of the Central Telegraph office in London. And there a panel of distinguished judges sat to effect the ultimate selection: Masefield, Dame Sybil Thorndike, S. Hibberd and Mrs. E. D. Atkinson, of Burnley-in-Wharfedale.

* * *

Just at this point in the English newspapers' accounts comes our first quarrel with them. Everybody knows that Masefield is the Poet Laureate and that Dame Sybil is an actress of both taste and talent. She "played America" with Ben Greet. Those papers carefully instruct us that Mr. S. Hibberd is the B. B. C.'s chief-announcer. But then they add that the lady from Burnley-in-Wharfedale "had been chosen by ballot as the Perfect Telephone Subscriber"—and they never drop a hint as to what virtues won her that high distinction!

* * *

We have no quarrel with certain of the arrangements. The judges' eyes were not permitted to prejudice their ears. The noble Nine were distant and screened throughout the trial. The Poet Laureate, the Dame, the Announcer and the Perfect Subscriber (from Burnley-in-Wharfedale), "seated at a table, listened through gilded hand-microphones" while candidate after candidate essayed "a practical test made up of such sentences as 'At the third stroke it will be one twenty-four and fifty seconds.'"

But then we are advised that each competitor "read a passage of some thirty lines from 'L'Allegro,' followed by a short extract from R. L. Stevenson's 'Treasure Island'"—and we are not told whether the "passage" was one about Amaryllis in the shade or whether the "extract" was the one about the apple barrel.

* * *

Now, you may say that, as to the literary information supplied by these British journals, we demand too much. They've let us know who wrote "L'Allegro," and they've been careful that we should not confuse R. L. Stevenson's "Treasure Island" with anybody's else, eh? Well, we call your attention to some further news omissions.

* * *

Note this, from the redoubtable London Times' account of the competition, after it has intimated that Miss Cain was the winner.

"Miss Cain has been a telephone operator for five years, and has worked in Croydon and Victoria Exchanges. After being congratulated, she admitted that 26 was a good guess concerning her age."

Soprano?
Mezzo?
Contralto?
Or female barytone?
Not a word about it!

* * *

And what's worse: No description of the paragon's appearance—not to mention a photograph.

This will never do! The newspaper-reading public isn't those judges. We want to know what a Girl with a Golden Voice looks like.

* * *

"Second place in the competition was taken by Miss I. H. Dunn, of the Trunk Exchange, London. Maj. G. C. Tryon, the Postmaster-General, presented a prize of 10 guineas to Miss Cain and one of 5 guineas to Miss Dunn."

What prize will the London Times present to that reader who guesses these girls' first names? The Post-Impressionist's guess is "Edith and Ivy."

Fair Enough

New York, Aug. 12.

THE idea that two of the most powerful nations on earth might pitch into a war merely because one does not believe that the king of the other is God or even God's great-grandson would be too silly for anybody's consideration if it were not for certain other manifestations. It should be kept in mind, however, that this is the year in which one of the greatest nations on earth hired men to perch in the trees along the main street of its national capital and bang dishpans with sticks in an attempt to frighten away flocks of starlings which were disturbing the peace. But the starlings were smarter than the best minds which one of the greatest nations on earth could bring to bear on the problem. As soon as a man was seen climbing a tree with his dishpan and stick, or a tin can containing rocks to be rattled about, the starlings would fly away to another tree and resume their chirping.

As there were hundreds of thousands of trees in Washington it was deemed impractical to put a man in each tree, and, anyway, the noise of the dishpans and the rocks in the tin cans was a worse nuisance than the chirping of the starlings. In fact, the starlings could not be heard above the din.

So the Government withdrew its men from the trees and authority was obtained for the purchase of a number of toy balloons on long leashes from the 5-and-10 and the employment of other men to walk along the streets playing them among the cornices and eaves of the tall buildings where the starlings liked to rest. But the starlings, who have seen many strange antics of the human race in Washington, were merely amused by the toy balloons, so the experiment did not succeed.

This was not a major failure of a great nation in its attempt to meet its problems, but it was an example of what a great nation can do at a time when the world seems to have gone nuts. Another example, of course, was the attempt to repudiate the great god, Efficiency, which had been worshiped for years, and to substitute a false god, Inefficiency, which was equivalent to devil-worship.

This occurred when manufacturers—who had become so efficient that one moderately skilled man or woman, working for low wages, could turn out vast quantities of stuff by machinery—were told that this efficiency was against the public interest because it disemployed thousands of people. This came as a shocking heresy and was finally disallowed by the United States Supreme Court. Efficiency was vindicated even though it had become a terrible Moloch demanding more and more sacrifices.

• • • •

THE Americans do not believe that the Japanese Emperor is God or even God's great-grandson, but the Japanese are so firm in this belief that they are inclined to be truculent toward anyone who considers him to be merely mortal and to treat him accordingly. Thus, any publisher with a mischievous nature or any irresponsible group of citizens who wish to assert their rights, may ridicule the Japanese diety with impunity, according to an old American domestic habit known as ribbing. In ribbing, the procedure is to find out another person's weakness and then kid him about it.

The baseball players are among the most accomplished ribbers in the country. When the St. Louis Cardinals, for example, discovered last fall that Schoolboy Rowe, the Tigers' best pitcher, was engaged to a girl named Edna, they tortured Mr. Rowe with falsetto cries of "Edna, oh, Edna, dearie" until he didn't know whether he was pitching ball or pitching hay.

The late Kid Gleason used to rib Bing Miller by calling him Booker T. Miller, or just Booker, with reference to his swarthy complexion. Mr. Jimmy Dykes, now of the White Sox, ribbed Mr. Gleason in turn, calling him Ab or Abner, which referred to his great age, a sensitive point with Mr. Gleason.

• • • •

EBNER DOUBLEDAY was the inventor of baseball. Ball players long ago discovered that Mr. Will Klem, the umpire, did not like to be called Catfish and that another umpire could be seriously annoyed by cries of Dog Face, and delighted to shout Muggsy at John McGraw. Some Protestant football teams used to rib Notre Dame about the Catholic religion.

It has always been the privilege of the American press to rib the opposition and foreign nations and dignitaries without restraint, and it will be hard to break an old habit out of consideration for the consequences, however solemn they may be.

Anything for a laugh, although in the Japanese there seems to have been discovered a subject who can not take it.

Of course, the Emperor isn't God. That is why it would be so ridiculous to get into a war over some disrespect to him. But people aren't quite right just now, and ridiculous things are being done in all solemnity, such as planting men in trees in the capital of the most enlightened and efficient democracy on earth to beat dishpans and clatter cans to scare away the birds whose subdued chirping in the evening annoys the nerves of the citizens!

Immortal Wren?

By
William Lyon Phelps

I REGARD the best books of Percival Christopher Wren as nearer to the immortal "Three Musketeers," by Dumas, than those written by any other living man; and while the novel that first made his reputation, "Beau Geste," is still his masterpiece, half a dozen others are filled with the excitement of adventure and the thrill that arises from the undaunted courage of man. For Dumas' three novels, "The Three Musketeers," "Twenty Years After," and "The Viscount of Bragelonne," while read primarily for the continuous flow of exciting incidents, are also full of inspiration in that they inculcate the virtues of courage, loyalty, unselfish devotion, and friendship.

• • • •

Capt. Percival Christopher Wren was educated at Oxford, has served in British, French and Indian armies, has seen active service in East and North Africa. He put forth his first book in 1912. But it was not until 1924, on the appearance of "Beau Geste," that he became internationally famous. The two novels that followed that, "Beau Sabreur" and "Beau Ideal," are also splendid narratives. In addition to these, I especially recommend, for the benefit of those who love stirring and heroic romances, "Soldiers of Misfortune," "Sowing Glory," "Sinbad the Soldier."

• • • •

Now his latest novel, published this year, called "Explosion," is not so good, and I think the reason for its inferiority is that it is really propaganda on behalf of the British rule in India. It is not because he is pro-British in India that I lost interest; there I am in agreement with him.

Reticules For Recovery

This Year Kiwanis Takes Leadership In Drive To Rid Men Of Coats In Summertime, But Custom Blocks Advances; Writer Suggests Solution And New Depression Panacea.

By Ralph E. Renaud.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

THIS year it was the Kiwanis. Every year it is somebody. It is only occasionally that Congress suffers from the heat, but each summer with unfailing regularity, along about July 1, mankind, and more especially the masculine half of mankind, begins to realize it is simply sweltering. And then, with unfailing regularity, somebody rises amid cheers and demands that men take off their coats in summer. Everybody says it is a swell idea, but gentlemen, as the saying goes, prefer coats. The only people who have resolutely solved the problem are the nudists and they throw away their pants, too, for good measure.

This year the battle cry rang out as the Kiwanis lunched at an air-conditioned hotel. It was voiced by George Goodstein, an attorney, and sounded something like "Brothers, unite! You have nothing to lose but your coats."

"I do not mean requiring the New York business man to carry his coat over his arm," said Mr. Goodstein. "I am in favor of going the whole hog and suggesting that men leave home in the morning without any coat, and with their shirt necks open. Yes, and with the necktie knot loosened and drawn down a bit." Forthwith, a resolution was adopted.

At last account, Mr. Goodstein was still wearing his coat. The revolution languishes, for custom doth make cowards of us all. But the discussion has been lively no end. As with the weather itself, everybody is talking about it, but nobody is doing anything about it. Perhaps it is too bad that the suggestion sprang from the Kiwanis, for they and similar groups, such as the Lions and Rotarians, confess to being fairly conventional-minded men. But there is more talk this year than ever before, perhaps because men have generally agreed to doff their winter garments of repentance for linen whites and whatnot.

MEANWHILE the women, without much talk about it, keep right on taking off more and more clothes. It has reached the point when you never know whether a girl has on stockings or not. Perhaps we had better stop right there. But anyway, a woman's summer costume can now be put in your eye, which is probably where it properly belongs. And they manage to look cool and comfortable, no matter how they feel. Women may be the conservative sex, but not regarding their attire.

Men are the conservatives there. A little color has crept into their attire, even for evening wear. Their summer fabrics have undoubtedly lost a little weight. But that is the extent of the reform. And the more a man gets up in the world the harder custom bears down on him. A truck driver can cavort to his heart's content in his undershirt and he doesn't lose a bit of social caste. In a small town a man can go anywhere, except into church, in his shirt sleeves. But let a shirt-sleeved man walk into the average restaurant in New York and he is either asked to put on his coat or thrown out, depending on his reaction. You can't find any missing coats in the hotel lobbies and on the better streets there are no men in shirt sleeves but the policemen, who, this year, have escaped from their age-long summer martyrdom for the first time.

THE pistols and blackjacks and manacles and summons books sticking out of the trousers' pockets of policemen bring up the practical difficulty of men shedding their coats. Most men in summertime carry in their coat pockets a handkerchief, a couple of packs of cigarettes, maybe three or four cigars, a fountain pen, a pencil or two, a few old letters, a bunch of keys, some loose change, a checkbook, some unpaid bills, some scraps of paper with hastily jotted telephone numbers or addresses, the letters his wife gave him to mail last week, and possibly a bag of nuts to nibble on the subway. What to do, what to do if he loses his coat?

The solution, of course, is strikingly simple. A woman has no pockets at all, but she carries around more impedimenta than a man, including mirrors and purses and lipsticks and compacts. But her shape is more important to her than her accommodations. She solves her problem with a handbag which outside is smooth and neat, but inside often resembles a grab-bag.

Why, then, don't men doff their coats and adopt reticules? We are not dead sure that "Reticules for Men" is a good, Nation-wide slogan, but the idea is sound. Moreover, if 50,000,000 men suddenly demanded handbags, how the manufacturers would rejoice! Prosperity would come back over night. How about "Reticules for Recovery" as a slogan? About everything else has been hitched up to the promise of good times and "Farewell to Pockets" has altogether too mournful a sound.

MUSICAL NOTE: The Fifth avenue home of Al Smith is adorned by an old-fashioned hand organ. When the Man in the Brown Derby feels sentimental he turns to the trusted instrument and manages to wheedle from its spiked cylinder such heart-rending tunes as "When We Were Sweet Sixteen," "Weary River," "Silver Threads Among the Gold" and, oddly enough, "The Sidewalks of New York."

It seems to be definitely established from the present heated controversy between Japan and the United States over a cartoon in the current issue of Vanity Fair that the Mikado hasn't got a jinricksha. But he has got a hand organ, purchased for him right here in New York City. It plays "Rainbow Round My Shoulders," "If I Had a Talking Picture of You," "The Sidewalks of New York" (which gets into the hair of most hand organs) and several Japanese (more or less) melodies, transcribed with loving care but a great deal of difficulty.

MUCH more shocking than the recent discovery that the spire of Trinity Church leans 18 inches out of the perpendicular and thus lends a crooked aspect to Wall street, which is otherwise as straight as a string (architecturally speaking), is the revelation of a corn patch in the rear of the churchyard. There is no doubt about it. Along the rear of the fence a line of cornstalks is beginning to shut out the view of Trinity place.

This is evidently Wall street's defiant answer to the AAA. Many people are beginning to ask significant and pointed questions. Was the consent of the Government of the United States obtained before the patch was planted? What are Mr. Wallace's views on the matter? Who will pay the processing tax? Do the farmers of the corn belt know what is going on in the financial center of New York? In a word, whither are we drifting?

Such a subversive idea is contagious. Since the expose on Trinity churchyard was printed several cornstalks have been discovered in a penthouse garden 17 stories up, where, figuratively speaking, they cry to heaven their contempt for the Department of Agriculture. There are already 5,000 subsistence plots in Queens Borough. What would happen if any of the tenant farmers took it into their heads to plant corn or wheat, or cotton, or peanuts, or potatoes, or even hogs? What then? Any of the forbidden crops might grow, except the hogs. And then the whole New Deal might crash—just because some shameless traitor shelled a corncob into Trinity churchyard.

La Follette Hit in Jaw In Senate—By Accident

By the United Press.

Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, struck Senator Robert M. La Follette square in the jaw yesterday—and in the Senate chamber. But it wasn't a fight; just an accident. Harrison flung out his arm to summon a page just as La Follette was passing. They both laughed and Harrison apologized.

In Abyssinia

By
A Swiss Observer

The following excerpts are taken from an article published in the Neue Zurcher Zeitung, Zurich German-language daily, and translated in the current issue of The Living Age.

Ethiopians Will Not Fight.

NEWS services in Abyssinia are very inadequate. The new government radio station releases as much information to the public as suits the powers that be. But it completely suppresses most most announcements bearing on the conflict with Italy.

The public is therefore very badly informed and discovers every eight or ten days what has been happening on the world stage some 16 or 20 days earlier when newspapers arrive from Europe. But the dispatches on current events arouse little interest because everyone knows that they have been superseded by more recent happenings.

Neutral observers were struck by the tremendous excitment that gripped the public last February when news of Italy's military measures against Abyssinia were made known. Not only the Abyssinian population but members of non-Italian embassy staffs all asked, "What does Italy want, and why is it arming against Abyssinia since the Abyssinian government has already announced that it is ready to bring the Ual Ual dispute before the World Court and abide by its verdict?" Abyssinians, young and old, were profoundly disturbed.

WHEN the news of Germany's re-armament was made public in the middle of March, both the Europeans and the natives breathed more easily in the hope that Italy was now tied to Europe and would abandon further preparations against Abyssinia. But alarm increased when Italy continued to ship troops, special workers, and war materials of the most modern variety to Eritrea and Somaliland in increasing numbers.

On March 13 representatives of Abyssinia and the commander of the Italian frontier troops signed an agreement to pacify the Ual Ual zone and to avoid further incidents. They established a neutral zone 40 kilometers wide between Gerlogubi and Ado. The Abyssinian government then availed itself of the services of the Swiss topographer, Hans Bickel. This disappointed the Italian frontier commander, since there was no Italian topographer, and he protested against a foreign neutral collaborating. Nevertheless, the neutral zone was maintained on the Abyssinian side.

Not until the second half of March did the Abyssinian government decide on mobilization, and even today no one wants a war with Italy. All informed circles know well enough that Abyssinian losses in a war against Italy would be tremendous. Abyssinia has very few trained troops with modern weapons, and the lovely photographs of Abyssinian soldiers in trenches handling machine guns are mere window dressing. The Abyssinian troops, if the word can be applied to undisciplined hordes, are very primitively equipped.

Arms and ammunition consist of a gun, a cartridge belt, and a knife or sword. The men go barefoot and follow their leader, who is mounted on a mule, as nimbly as a pack of weasels. Nobody cheers when the soldiers march through town. These thin, tall, healthy-looking men spend from three to four weeks on foot near the threatened frontier, wearing honest self-conscious expressions. They give the impression that they all know how serious the situation is for them and that there is no good samaritan to protect the integrity of their native soil.

THE neutral observer can not escape the conclusion that no Abyssinian dreams of threatening any foreign colonial possession. They would appreciate having their own access to the sea, but every Abyssinian knows that any attempt to gain this end by force would be equivalent to suicide. Furthermore, Italy once offered the Abyssinian government a free port at Assab in Eritrea, asking in return the concession for building a highway westward into the interior of Abyssinia. For years the Italian government has also wanted to build a railway from Asmara running south through Abyssinia, passing west of Addis Ababa and then taking a southeasterly direction to the port of Mogadiscio in Italian Somaliland. That this concession was never granted was due to the activities of France and England.

Now the Abyssinian government has mobilized, too. But, compared with Italian preparations, the deliveries of arms and ammunition that Abyssinia is receiving are very modest. Except for a small number of anti-aircraft guns and a few machine guns, the Abyssinians have no modern weapons, offensive or defensive. They possess no gas masks, for instance. They have barely a half-dozen old transport planes to provide them with air defense, and their chief pilots are French. Their information services are also very primitive. Under these circumstances, it is easy to understand that the Abyssinians are determined not to attack under any circumstances and will retire into the mountains if Italy takes the offensive.

Senators Alter Tax Bill and Cut Off 200 Million

chagrin, a lion's roar of protest from Senator William E. Borah and flat assertions from House leaders that taxes on lower incomes will never be approved by that body.

As the quick-step in legislative developments indicated an early termination of congressional bill feinting, President Roosevelt called Speaker Byrns and Senate Majority Leader Robinson to the White House.

After luncheon with the President, Speaker Byrns said Congress could adjourn before September 1. Senator Robinson went that one better. The Senate leader said possibilities pointed to an adjournment wind-up next week.

It was Senator Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, a fishing partner of the President, who offered the motion that tore from the tax bill the broad La Follette income tax revision. His motion met a tie on the first ballot. Later the committee broke the deadlock, and eliminated the La Follette schedule by a one-vote margin.

Companies Hardest Hit.

Although the revised Senate rates more nearly approximate the "wealth taxing" proposals of the President, the Senate committee showed a decided inclination to make corporations bear the brunt of the revenue pick-up, through the new corporation income, intercompany dividends and excess profits taxes.

The House shied away from many heavy imposts on business, deriving the bulk of its revenue proposals from the individually wealthy, through inheritance schedules and heavy surtax imposts. For this reason, the Senate proposals to broaden corporation income levies and dig deeply into intercorporate dividends, are likely to be staunchly opposed in the House.

A prolonged floor fight in House and Senate was probably avoided yesterday, however, by rejection not only of the LaFollette income schedule, but by defeat as well of a proposal to make husband and wife in eight "community property" States file joint returns.

Married couples in Nevada, California, Arizona, Washington, Texas, Louisiana, New Mexico and Idaho, now are able to avoid many of the higher surtaxes by filing separate returns. Unknown to the general public, the Finance Committee had adopted an amendment by Senator Edward P. Costigan (Democrat), Colorado, Saturday, requiring couples in these States to file joint returns.

When he learned of the amendment, Vice President Garner became active yesterday, as did Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, one of the "community property" States. In Connally's own words, the amendment on reconsideration was "knocked higher than a kite."

Borah Is Pleased.

Chairman Harrison of the Finance Committee, who recently indicated he would support the House inheritance tax schedules, with modifying amendments, on the Senate floor, was silent on that point yesterday.

"I think the bill is greatly improved, and more in keeping with the President's recommendations," the Mississippian commented.

"With the exception of the estate taxes which this committee substituted for the inheritance tax, it carries out largely the President's suggestions."

Senator Borah, who had broken sharply with La Follette on the Wisconsin Progressive's proposal to start new surtax rates at $3,000, received news of the committee's action with a grin.

"It would have been beaten in the Senate anyway," he said. "I don't believe it would get more than 20 votes."

Predictions of House defeat of the proposals were made by House Democratic leaders, from the Speaker down.

"Ice will be a foot thick on the Potomac before that ever gets through the House," Representative Sam D. McReynolds (Democrat), of Texas, commented on the House rates.

Revenue from the proposed Senate surtaxes on incomes over $1,000,000 would yield only $5,000,000 as against $220,000,000 from the La Follette schedules. In 1933, there were only 46 persons reporting incomes of $1,000,000 and over. Proposed House surtaxes would have affected more than 7,000 persons. These rates ranged from 31 per cent on $50,000 incomes to 75 per cent on more than $5,000,000.

Changes Are Listed.

Compared with modified Senate excess profits tax proposals, lightening the load on the smaller corporations, the House rates would have imposed 5 per cent on corporate profits of 8 to 12 per cent, ranging to 20 per cent of company profits over 25 per cent.

The House had approved only a two-bracket step-up in corporation income taxes—13¾ per cent up to $15,000, and 14¼ above that amount. The President instead had asked a steep graduation, from 10¾ to 16¾. The Finance Committee last Saturday approved the House rates, but yesterday brought them more nearly in conformity with the President's plan.

The House bill graduated inheritance taxes from 5 per cent on the first $10,000 to 75 per cent on more than $10,000,000, while gift taxes were graduated from 3 per cent of the first taxable $10,000 to 57 per cent on more than $10,000,000.

The Senate group, after eliminating the inheritance tax altogether, proposed a gift tax ranging from 1½ per cent up to $10,000, to 52½ per cent on over $60,000,000.

Vote on Taxes

Following is how the Senate Finance Committee voted yesterday on new tax proposals:

On the La Follette broad income tax schedule: Against—Barkley, Connally, Bailey, Harrison, Lonergan and Guffey (Democrats), and Metcalf and Capper (Republicans). For—King, George, Costigan, Clark, Byrd and Gerry (Democrats), and La Follette (Progressive). Rejected, 8 to 7.

On the Harrison amendment starting new surtaxes at $1,000,000: For—Harrison, Barkley, George, Connally, Costigan, Bailey, Byrd, Lonergan and Guffey (Democrats), and Capper and Metcalf (Republicans). Against—King and Gerry (Democrats), and La Follette (Progressive). Adopted, 11 to 3.

On proposed graduation in corporation income taxes: For—Harrison, Barkley, George, Connally, Clark, Lonergan, Black and Guffey (Democrats), and Capper (Republican), and La Follette (Progressive). Against—Bailey, Byrd and Gerry (Democrats), and Metcalf (Republican). Approved, 10 to 4.

On proposed intercorporate dividend tax: For—Harrison, Bailey, Clark, Connally, Lonergan, Black and Guffey (Democrats), and La Follette (Progressive). Against—Byrd, George and King (Democrats), and Metcalf (Republican). Approved, 8 to 4.

Possible Economies Listed in Tax Statement Given Congress.

the possibilities for saving $250,000,000 this fiscal year out of the regular expenditures of the Government "appear upon the face of the figures," pointing out that the $3,302,000,000 appropriated for that purpose in the year which started July 1, last, totaled $3,302,000,000 or $747,000,000 more than was actually spent in the previous fiscal year and $860,000,000 more than was spent in the 1934 fiscal year.

Economy Move Instanced.

At this point the chamber cited a specific instance of how regular governmental expenditures might be reduced without impairing the efficiency of governmental functions. It pointed out that on July 31 disbursing officers and agencies had to their credit $1,460,000,000 in addition to the $1,789,000,000 carried in the Treasury's general fund on the same day.

"The amount to the credit of disbursing officers is clearly excessive" the chamber's committee contended. "On July 31, 1934, this amount was $718,000,000 and a year earlier was $355,000,000. The excess in this amount may well run at least $700,000,000 above a reasonable figure.

"Interest alone on this excess reaches more than $18,000,000 a year—or almost as much as the estimated receipts from the gift taxes carried by the pending bill," the committee asserted.

The chamber contended that "another method of narrowing the gap between receipts and expenditures this year would be realization on unneeded assets of corporations and agencies which have been created by the Government to make expenditures in different directions."

Thirty Such Agencies.

There are more than 30 such agencies, the chamber pointed out, adding that agencies wholly owned by the Federal Government had an excess of assets over liabilities and reserves of $3,322,000,000 on June 30, last. The chamber held it was "reasonable to expect that by next June there could be realization of at least one-tenth of this excess, and that such realization would not cause hardship to any persons or enterprises that have received assistance."

But it was in the appropriations for relief that the chamber believed the largest savings could be made. It approached these expenditures from two angles. In the first approach the chamber pointed out that the $4,100,000,000 should be cut at least $500,000,000 on the ground that no larger figure for that activity should be spent this fiscal year than was expended in the last fiscal year.

Actual expenditures in the year which closed June 30, last, totaled $3,600,000,000 for relief, including, the chamber emphasized, "unexpected and large amounts for regions affected by severe drought, on account of which Congress made a special appropriation in June of $525,000,000.

"Since there are fortunately no comparable drought conditions this year," the statement continued, "it would seem that contemplated expenditures this fiscal year are well toward $1,000,000,000 above the comparable basis of last year. A saving of $500,000,000 would thus leave an excess well toward a like amount."

In its second approach to the problem of paring relief expenses, the chamber pointed out that "although private employment has increased, expenditures of funds for relief purposes have increased" and that, moreover, in the first months of this year State and local expenditures for relief purposes aggregated $194,000,000 or almost one-quarter more than in the similar period of 1934—but "there has been no corresponding decrease in Federal expenditures."

Direct Relief Examined.

Asserting that the "record of expenditures, and reasonable estimates for actual needs in the current year, make clear the possibilities of reductions in Federal costs for relief and public works," the chamber, after giving an analysis of the pertinent figures, contended that the direct relief load alone could be reduced $200,000,000 by turning the "unemployables" back to the States. Thus the chamber would hold direct relief expenditures down to $1,400,000,000.

Turning to the PWA and work relief, the chamber conceded that construction which has been started should not be abandoned in an uncompleted stage and that contracts made in good faith should be kept. But it pointed out that PWA in 1935 fiscal year spent slightly more than $1,000,000,000.

"Business has improved and there is prospect of still further improvement," the chamber argued. "In view of this situation, expenditure by PWA in the current fiscal year of the same amount as spent last year, that is, $1,000,000,000, would appear liberal."

The London Daily Express has launched a campaign to make the movement nation-wide. It says:

"More than 150,000 women in this country have had to make the choice between children and homes or their jobs. Hundreds of those, by means of secrecy, are managing to live half their lives as wives and mothers and half as 'spinster' workers.

"The lifting of the ban on 12,000 teachers and doctors employed by the London County Council is being hailed by thousands of women as the first advance toward the removal of a serious grievance."

Elizabeth Dall Bateman Married to Lieut. Cooper

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Dall Bateman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence V. Bateman, to Lieut. Eugene Gordon Cooper, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Cooper, of Roanoke, Va., Saturday evening in the Memorial Chapel of the Army Medical Center with Chaplain Frank L. Miller officiating. While the guests were assembling, a musical program was presented by Miss Gwendolyn Taylor and Miss Mary E. Schick.

The bride, who was escorted and given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of shell-pink mousseline de soie made on princess lines, ending in a long train bordered with a ruffle of the material in fine knife pleating and having long sleeves ending in a point over the hand. Her off-the-face hat was of shell-pink horsehair trimmed with pink velvet, and she carried a prayer book from which fell a shower of lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Willis Nowell, cousin of the bride and her only attendant, wore a gown of pale yellow mousseline de soie fashioned on much the same lines as that of the bride, with short sleeves and a shorter train. With this she carried a shirred muff of the same material as her dress, fastend to which was an old-fashioned bouquet.

The mother of the bride was gowned in blue lace with white accessories and wore a shoulder bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley. Capt. W. Harvey Kernan, of Carlisle, Pa., was best man and the ushers included Capt. Clifford H. Perry, Capt. Kester L. Hastings, Lieut. Edward J. Gearin and Lieut. Carroll C. Barrick.

A reception was held, after the ceremony, in the garden of the Dodge Hotel. Later in the evening Lieut. and Mrs. Cooper left on a wedding trip, the latter wearing a blue and white boucle suit and white accesories. They will make their home in Carlisle, where Lieut. Cooper is stationed.

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. Herschel Shaw, of Houlton, Me.; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Richardson, of Somerville, Mass.; Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Burns, of Hicksville, N. Y.; Mrs. Robert L. Cooper, Miss Thelma Cooper and Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Cooper, of Roanoke, Va., and several members of the post where Liuet. Cooper is stationed.

Housewife Who Suffers From Over-Fatigue Receives Blame Rather Than Sympathy

Bargain Offer Of Cosmetics Sells at $1.75

Free Box of Powder Is Included; Flower Clips Brighten Frocks.

By Dudley Harmon,
Pinch Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

WITH EACH $1.75 purchase of a certain line of cosmetics, a downtown store is offering free a box of powder. The powder is an excellent brand, moisture proof and of fine-grained quality. It comes in a most attractive box of French enamel, which can be used again when supply is exhausted.

The cosmetics are put out by a house known all over the country for the excellence of its products. The articles include perfume, toilet water, eau de cologne, powder, rouge, lipstick, bath accessories, eye cosmetics and nail preparations.

The specialty of this house is its eau de cologne, which is of an unusually fine quality. It has manifold uses. For instance, as a daytime perfume it has a delicate, lingering fragrance, and can be applied directly to the skin or sprayed from an atomizer on linen, frock or handkerchief.

Excellent Also for Hair.

Although you've probably never thought of using eau de cologne on your hair, strangely enough it has an excellent effect. It helps to calm down the frizzy permanent and is particularly good after a shampoo. Needless to say, it leaves the hair smelling delightfully fragrant afterward.

To relieve fatigue before going out in the evening, rub in some of this bouquet briskly with your hand, or pat it on the forehead and temples. You'll be agreeably surprised at the sense of relaxation which it brings.

It is also ideal as a freshener and summer pick-me-up, as well as a stimulant. On motor and train trips, at home or in the office, use it for cooling relief. Or place a well-saturated handkerchief over forehead and eyes for a few moments; it will rest them tremendously.

As a substitute for sachets, spray eau de cologne generously in linen and clothes closets and also in dresser drawers. Hostesses whose living rooms resemble a Chinese opium den after several hours' smoking by their guests should spray this into the air with an atomizer. It will cool and clear the air.

The eau de cologne comes in all sizes and is priced from $1 up.

Artificial Posies Freshen Dress.

THE OTHER DAY we came across a solution to the problem of what to do with that summer dress which has become a deadly bore after two months of hard wear. An enterprising establishment has put out bunches of artificial flowers which clip on to dress or shoes. They come in little nosegays of daisies, cornflowers and forget-me-nots, and are so lifelike you can almost smell them. Colors range all the way from pastel blue to baby pink, and are incredibly dainty and fresh looking.

Few accessories can brighten up a dress as well as flowers. They impart a completely new and springlike look to the most jaded frock. And the nice feature about these particular ones is that they can be switched from dress to dress without any bothersome ripping or sewing. The most fetching place to wear them is right under the chin.

The shoe clips come in the shape of little arcs, shaped to fit the instep of your pumps. All clips cost 50 cents.

Matching Bath Sponges.

MORE ABOUT bathroom accessories! This time it's a sponge to match the color scheme of your bathroom. By a special process recently invented they have discovered how to dye sponges, after having tried for 50 years to do so. The sponges come in orchid, blue, black and rose, and are priced at 50 cents.

Natural sponges such as these hold water much better than the ordinary rubber ones. They are also more sanitary, because the pores of rubber sponges are so fine that the dirt becomes clogged inside them.

Inefficiency in the Home Held Cause of Weariness

MISS MARY ROKAHR.

Equipment or Domestic Management or Both May Be at Fault, Miss Mary Rokuhr, U. S. Expert Finds; Suggests Program.

By Emma Perley Lincoln.

LIKE THE PEDESTRIAN in Paris who is arrested in a traffic accident, rather than the taxi driver who ran into him, so in the modern scheme of things, the housewife who suffers from over-fatigue is blamed rather than pitied.

Thus another bid for human sympathy goes down before the march of efficiency into the home, and the perpetually tired woman, instead of attracting compassion to herself is merely considered as managing badly, and in consequence interfering with the happiness of those around her.

"Over-fatigue," says Miss Mary Rokahr, Department of Agriculture, extension economist specializing in home management, "is a sure sign that something is wrong in the home. The equipment is faulty, the workers are unskilled, or the management and executive set-up are both ineffectual."

Whether or not a house manager suffers from fatigue, depends largely, Miss Rokahr believes, on her mental attitude toward her home.

"Every home-maker," she points out, "needs to decide on her own ambition, whether it is to be an understanding mother, a charming hostess, a better educated person or a combination of all three. These she should check on herself as manager, so that she may reorganize her time to achieve that goal.

"If she is actually doing her own housework, she must first ask herself these questions: 'How can I arrange my kitchen to save steps and to minimize waste motion? How can I arrange the work of the day to the best advantage? How can I acquire a better skill, a surer hand in effort? How can I secure a hundred per cent co-operation from my family?'"

Must Have Sufficient Sleep.

A most important question is whether she is getting the right amount of sleep. Is she in pure fresh air, both day and night? Is the light right in work areas? Are her shoes fitted properly for the greatest comfort? Are her clothes too warm or too tight?

These, according to Miss Rokahr, are questions in the catechism which has evolved from a series of group meetings, which have been taking place during the year among women all over the country.

Farm women, particularly are interested in the problem of eliminating fatigue. As a result of the awareness resulting from this study, Miss Rokahr says that women are discovering innumerable small things which contribute immeasurably to their endurance and enjoyment of housekeeping.

They have agreed to sit down to iron and to prepare vegetables. One woman said she found she could save herself by using a basket for carrying a number of articles at a time from the kitchen to the basement, a routine which formerly had meant several trips.

Any number of women found that their kitchen sinks were the wrong height for comfort and were badly lighted and that the relation of the refrigerator to the pantry and dining room was causing unnecessary motion.

Farm women who have to rise early have found that by planning they can snatch a nap during the day, and the "rest corner" in kitchens is becoming the rule rather than the exception. An easy chair in the corner, where one can relax with closed eyes for a few moments while waiting for something to come out of the oven, or to come to a boil, may be the means of sparing the family an irritating hour later on.

Washing, Ironing Tax Energy.

Women are finding in these study meetings that it is generally considered wise to get the heavier tasks out of the way early in the day. Of all the work done in the home, women universally agree, that washing, ironing and cleaning come closest to being drudgery, and take the biggest toll from the strength and spirit.

Family co-operation, according to Miss Rokahr, is one of the most interesting phases of household efficiency. The family bulletin board is so usual now, she says, that it scarcely deserves mention. Sometimes it is a plain beaver board put up in a back hall, on which are tacked slips with the assignments for the day. Sometimes there is a spindle labeled for each member of the family, with that individual's tasks tabulated on a slip of paper.

Does Away With Arguing.

All agree that this system does away with the endless talking and arguing and explaining, which in itself is fatiguing. Children compete for grades in excellence and benefit from the training and discipline. Some mothers have put in a chore card system, by which each child keeps a daily report of his work, the entire report discussed at the end of the week.

Mothers with small children have the greatest difficulty in keeping to a schedule that eliminates fatigue, for constant and unexpected interruptions are their lot. These may be lessened with the right amount of thought and approach.

Check Health Of Child Now, Parents Told

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

The end of August brings the reopening of schools very close, and the shops begin to see crowds of children being fitted out for school and college. In preparing the children for winter, parents are apt to forget that clothes are by no means all the equipment necessary. To overhaul and renovate or replenish wardrobes twice a year is not nearly as essential as checking up on health.

This should be done every six months, and is most easily accomplished when school is not in session. It may sound like a superfluous item in the care of children, but is apt to prove a valuable precaution. If, for reasons of economy, doctors' fees are beyond the family means, there are excellent clinics scattered about the country, which will make an examination free of charge or for a nominal fee.

Teeth, bodily functions, organs should all be tested, and if treatment of any kind is required it should be started at once while the child still has energy and health bottled up from the long vacation.

Parents are prone to wait for symptoms in the case of a child. When the tooth aches, they take him to the dentist. When he complains of headaches, they have his eyes examined. Frequently such a weakness as spinal curvature will go undetected for years and prove impossible of cure, whereas, had it been discovered in its incipient stage, it might have been set right with little trouble.

For contagious diseases, the symptoms are generally the only warning. But chronic troubles are often preventable if precautions are taken before the active symptoms appear. The ricketty child, the child with kidney or heart trouble, is in a dangerous condition when his symptoms have become acute.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

"If I Could Find a Good Job and Dress Better and Be More Cheerful, Maybe Things Would Improve," Writes Unloved Wife.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am very discouraged. I would like to get a good job. I have worked for the Government (in the 1930 census card punching) but because my husband is now working for the Government I can not get in. He makes only $1,200 a year. We have three children (ranging from 9 years to 17 years) and you know how fast money goes when you try to feed, clothe and educate children.

I thought of answering an advertisement the other day which advertised for an attractive woman. But my husband said I was not attractive enough and that I would only be wasting my time. Well, I got so blue I could not answer it. You see, I still have long hair (because it costs so much to take proper care of bobbed hair) and my clothes are not what a well-dressed woman would wear. I would like to look nice, though.

* * * *

The children are large enough so that I could work. I can type. I have typed this letter. My husband is (or thinks he is) in love with another woman. She is well dressed and very modern. Work and care of the children, combined with lack of money, have taken their toll of me. But if I could find a good job and could dress better and be more cheerful, maybe things would improve. I will appreciate any help.

KITTY R.

There Are Always Jobs.

DEAR KITTY R.: I wish I knew of a good job that might be yours for the asking, but I must confess that I don't. However, there are such jobs, and you can find one if you will.

Stop thinking in terms of "if I could find a good job, and could dress better and could be more cheerful——"

Say to yourself, firmly, confidently and repeatedly: "I am going to find a good job; I am going to dress better; I am more cheerful," and put the "ifs" and "buts" to rout. Answer every advertisement you see that suggests potential employment—and don't tell your husband that you're doing it or planning to do it.

* * * *

There's always a certain amount of stimulating excitement incident to planning a pleasant surprise, so take the attitude you're going to surprise your husband (and the whole family, for that matter) by getting a job. I've just met a women, the mother of a son and daughter in college, who's recently done it, after spending the past 20 years ministering to the needs of husband and family. And she did it all on her own, by answering advertisements.

Now, let's talk about that hair of yours. You say, "I still have long hair," as though you were making a shameful confession. Under the circumstances, it's probably a good thing. No grown woman should have her hair bobbed until she's completely sure of her type of good looks; knows exactly how to dress to best advantage, and has time and money to spend on grooming herself, particularly her hair.

If your hair is very long, I suggest you take scissors in hand and yourself clip it to shoulder-length, so that it can be drawn softly back to the nape of the neck and there coiled into a smooth bun, or turned up into a soft roll along the hair line and securely pinned. Tumbling masses of heavy hair are definitely outmoded, but long hair can look just as smart and sometimes even smarter on the individual than cropped locks.

* * * *

Keep it scrupulously clean with weekly shampoo, brush it vigorously with a stiff brush, dress it simply and your long hair will never keep you from qualifying as "attractive."

* * * *

No doubt work and child care, combined with lack of money, has taken its toll of your good looks, but you must remember that the years pass more or less heavy-handedly over all human beings, regardless of their situation or occupation. It's how we react to what is happening or has happened to us that counts most in our appearance. It requires effort to notice lines in the face of the optimist with shining eyes; it's impossible to overlook them in the face whose eyes are dull and discouraged.

* * * *

In the years that have passed, you have unquestionably learned how to be a responsible, dependable woman, patient, charitable, pleasant, adaptable and courageous. These are qualities which count in holding a job. Self-confidence and the will to succeed count in getting one. Don't ever talk over your plans with anyone who might interject a discouraging word.

* * * *

You speak of the other woman with whom your husband thinks he is in love and whom you describe as being "well dressed and very modern." Even she may serve her purpose for good in your life, if you will it so. She may be the sharp challenge you need to bestir you into the desire and into the effort to lift yourself out of a rut and become an attractive woman in your own right.

As I have said before in this column, fervent desire to achieve a worthwhile goal is a form of prayer in itself, and prayer literally moves figurative mountains. You can demonstrate this truth in your own case, and I sincerely hope you will.

Raglan Sleeve Model Makes Smart Late Summer Dress

Pattern No. 905.

JUST ABOUT NOW, when the first freshness of summer wardrobes has worn off, a smart in-between type of frock like this is most welcome. With a simple, clearly charted, perfectly cut pattern, it can be made without difficulty in a vacation cottage, far from the "little home dressmaker." It would be very appropriate to make up in a printed or novelty crepe for wear under a heavy coat later.

The skirt flares slightly. The raglan sleeves give the new broad-shouldered effect, but are dart-tucked into a smooth fit and fullness. The pattern is cut in sizes 14 to 42. In size 18, the long-sleeved version requires 4¼ yards of 39-inch material.

Stylish Lady Cavendish Is Small Women's Guide

Simplicity Is Her First Rule; She Never Overdresses.

By the United Press.

PARIS, Aug. 13.—Although fashions are designed primarily for tall women, one of the smartest women in the world is tiny Lady Cavendish, who before her marriage was Adele Astaire, the American dancer. Lady Cavendish follows one principle that might well be used to advantage by other women—she always avoids being overdressed, wearing too much jewelry, bows, metal work or frills.

She never wears large brimmed hats, but chooses caps, turbans and close-fitting hats, as large hats have a tendency to dwarf a woman and make her look square and short. Likewise she never wears evening gowns that are cut extremely low in front. She prefers gowns high at the throat with the decollete only in back, thus giving her a longer line.

Her evening gowns are cut simply and never have elaborate draping, ruffles, bows or flowers decorating the skirt. Lady Cavendish wears one in black crepe which is cut straight and is unadorned except for a 6-inch band of fullness which cascades to the floor from midcalf length.

For daytime wear she selects simple, quiet clothes. For afternoon she wears a black crepe, short sleeved and pulled in at the waist with a sash. High at the neck is a blue scarf encrusted with blue stones, and with this costume she wears a black-peaked hat with an outstanding net veil which gives her height.

She wears little jewelry, believing that jewelry hardens a woman, whereas furs soften and give bloom.

Paris Decrees Shorter Skirts As Winter Fashion Show Ends

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 12.—Shorter skirts seem to have won the hem-length war at the winter fashion show which closed today after launching the most discussed mode in years.

Leading designers sponsored skirts that are shortened several inches, even for afternoon wear, although other prominent dressmakers decreed longer garments. There are numerous trousered skirts, too.

Waistlines will be normal on a shade below, necklines high, shoulders generally widened and skirts narrow in suits and morning dresses, but wider for the afternoon styles. Feminine curves are to be revealed.

Ideas borrowed from the Italian Renaissance, the Egyptians and the Greeks are obvious in the colors, rich fabrics, jeweled ornaments and draperies.

Military influence also is evident in the drum major frog trimmings, gold braiding and double-breasted coats.

Numerous styles of knee-length fur capes are made of astrakhan, monkey, fox and lynx furs. There are some elbow-length fur gloves, too.

Many suits are muti-colored tweeds with hip-length box jackets. There are scores of dressy black suits, furred with astrakhan, broadtail and silver fox, accompanied by blouses of colored georgette and velvet cravats.

Day dresses accented zipper fastenings and padlocked belts, buttons made of metal bear claws, crowns, sphinxes, lacquered turtles, buckles and clips of jade dragons and big Rhinestone flowers.

Sulphur Used In Treatments For Arthritis

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THAT the arthritis problem is not new to our generation is evidenced by the bony changes found in the fossil skeletons of prehistoric monsters. Even the dinosaurs had health problems. There is also indisputable evidence of the existence of the disease in ancient Egypt (about 1300 B. C.).

The present-day spread of the disease is now gaining recognition by the lay public and physicians are alert to its occurrence. Some conception of the economic loss entailed may be visualized from the fact that in 1932 more than 64,000 war veterans were on the pension lists for arthritis of the joints. One patient out of 18 admitted to the veterans' hospitals enters because of a primary diagnosis of arthritis, while a large number who come for other conditions show the effects of arthritis.

A great change has come over the attitude of physicians toward this chronic disease and the efforts of hundreds of investigators have resulted in a better understanding of the chemistry of the body and hence many suggested forms of treatment. Research has led to the use of histamine, gold salts, colloidal sulphur, and many other substances—all designed to restore body metabolism to normal.

Inasmuch as the disease profoundly influences the reactions of the body, studies on the hair, nails, blood, and bones were made. Among other facts of interest it was disclosed that in arthritis the normal amount of sulphur in the finger nails was reduced 25 to 50 per cent. Since we know that sulphur is necessary in the economy of the body, the suggestion was offered that feeding sulphur to arthritic patients might restore to normal some important body function. Of course, no one would take it for granted that sulphur was the only body chemical affected by the disease, but it might be one of consequence.

Then came a problem, namely: How could sulphur be made soluble and hence suitable for injection into the blood stream? It was finally decided to reduce this element to what is known as a colloidal state, which is not a true solution, but a suspension of very fine particles considerably larger than molecules. Colloid solutions may be made of many of the metals, for example, gold and silver; and well-known examples are coffee, beer, gelatin, etc.

In a recent report Woldenberg, of the Veterans' Administration, cites his experience with 200 arthritic patients to whom colloidal sulphur was given. Twenty milligrams were injected into a vein every other day until 10 or 12 doses had been administered. The same amount was given into the muscles on alternate days. Heat from electrical sources, hot baths, and massage were used in connection with the treatment. Following the injections it was found that the amount of sulphur in the nails had increased and, in many instances, was normal. In severe cases the doses were continued for a longer period. The patients treated in one of the veterans' hospitals showed more satisfactory results, on the whole, than with any other form of therapy. Many of the cases treated exhibited bony changes crippling in effect. After the treatment some of these were able to get about without the aid of crutches.

Arthritis must be fairly well advanced before the disease can be demonstrated by means of an X-ray examination.

Quantities of Good Peaches Are on the Market and This Is the Time to Can Them

No Long, Hot Hours Over Stove Required by Cold Pack Method

Clothes Boiler Can Be Adapted for Steriling Jars, So Let's Start With Peaches, Which Are Ready for Canning Now.

By Dorothea Duncan.

It is foolish to evade the canning issue any longer, especially when the market is flooded with delicious, firm peaches. Let's can our peaches by the cold pack method this year. It is much simpler than standing for hours over a steaming kettle of simmering fruit.

You will need a large boiler in which to immerse your fruit jars, but you can wash out your clothes boiler and use it. There is no need of buying one especially for the canning season. If you haven't a rack for the boiler buy one or have your husband construct one by nailing a few firm boards together.

Ten Main Points.

Select firm, well grown, but not overripe fruit. All soft or overripe peaches can be saved for making jams and conserves.

If possible, can fruit on the day that it is picked.

Wash, pare and prepare the fruit, removing all bruised or decayed parts.

If there is much variation in size, sort the fruit so that the contents of each jar will be as nearly uniform as possible.

Chill Briefly.

Chill the outside of the blanched peaches by immersing the fruit for a brief period in a large receptacle of cold water. Do not attempt to cool the fruit thoroughly by this dip.

Pack the fruit firmly in clean, tested jars to within one-half inch of the top.

Fill the jars with boiling sirup—using four cups of water to five cups of sugar for the sirup.

Place a rubber on each jar, adjust the cover of the jar, and partly seal it by adjusting only the upper clamp or by slightly screwing the lid.

Place the jars on the rack in the boiler. Cover to an inch above the lids with boiling water. When the water begins to boil again cook the peaches for 20 minutes. The water must be boiling during the entire 20 minutes.

Look for Leakage.

When the peaches have cooked for the desired length of time turn out the fire to remove the boiler from the stove. Remove the jars from the hot water bath with long tongs. Seal the jars and invert while they are cooling. If there is a leakage in any jar it will show up at this time. The jars should be cooled as quickly as possible, but never be placed in a draft. When the jars are cool, wash and label them and store them in a cool place.

If your kitchen is small, do the preliminary preparation in the kitchen and the actual cooking in the boiler in the basement.

Use the soft or overripe peaches for peach butter. Fruit butter is one of the most wholesome of fruit sweets because it contains a large amount of fruit to a small amount of sugar.

PEACH BUTTER.

2 quarts peach pulp
4 cups sugar
1 cup water

Pare, stone, slice and measure fruit. Place it in the preserving kettle with the water and heat it very slowly. When it is soft, pass the peaches through a fine sieve, return the pulp to the fire, add the sugar, and cook until thick and clear. Pack in hot, clean jars and seal.

Cherry Pudding Is Delectable

Marshmallows Make It an Excellent Dessert for Summer.

Generally speaking, you wouldn't choose a baked pudding as a very refreshing dish for a hot summer's day. But if the pudding is a light, airy cake made with sour cherries peeping out here and there, soft, spongy marshmallows hiding betwixt cake and cherries, and a delectable sauce of more marshmallows and cherry juice that seeps through the cake—well, that is a different story.

This dish is simply the latest version of the cherry pudding. We suggest that you bake it in an ovenresistant dish and serve it hot or cold, as you prefer, right from the oven dish.

It is a filling dessert, to be sure, and so the meal that precedes it should be light. A salad is the kind of meal that will leave plenty of holes in your appetite, and this cherry pudding is just the dessert to fill them and send you away from the table feeling satisfied but not stuffy.

Fresh Cherries Used.

The original recipe calls for canned red cherries, but while a few fresh cherries are available let's use those. Sugar must be added to the fresh cherries, so the recipe must be changed just a little if fresh cherries are being used. The variation for the fresh cherry pudding appears after the original recipe.

CHERRY PUDDING.

2 cups drained cherries
½ cup sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup sugar
1/3 cup shortening
1 egg
¼ cup milk
½ teaspoon vanilla
12 marshmallows
¼ cup broken walnut meats.

Drain cherries. Cream butter and add sugar gradually, mixing well. Add egg. Sift rest of dry ingredients and add alternately with the flour. Add vanilla.

Stand six whole marshmallows on bottom of well greased heat resistant glass casserole. Arrange one cup of cherries around marshmallows; sprinkle with ¼ cup nut meats. Spread one-half the stiff batter over all; repeat with cherries, marshmallows, nut meats and batter, leaving the top of the marshmallows to show through the top of the pudding. Cover and bake. This fills a 1½-quart casserole. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for 1¼ hours.

If fresh cherries are used add one-third cup sugar to the seeded cherries. Serve this pudding with cherry sauce.

CHERRY SAUCE.

½ cup sugar
3 tablespoons flour
2 cups cherry juice
3 marshmallows cut in small pieces

Mix the sugar and flour together; add the cherry juice gradually and cook (stirring constantly) until you have a smooth thickened sauce. Add bits of marshmallows just before serving.

If fresh cherries have been used in the pudding there will be no cherry juice to use for the sauce. If this is the case, stew some of the fresh cherries in their own juice and a little water and use the juice obtained for the sauce, proceeding by the same method as given for the sauce using canned cherry juice.

This pudding will be equally as successful if the marshmallows and nuts are omitted from the recipe. This way the pudding is not so rich and is more suitable for children. If the marshmallows are omitted add 1/3 cup sugar to the canned cherries to take the place of the sweetening otherwise provided for by the marshmallows.

Cream butter, add sugar and cream and beat well together. Add lemon rind, and gradually add flour sifted with baking powder. Knead lightly, roll out on a floured baking board and cut out with a small cutter. Lay on slightly greased tins, and bake in a moderate oven for ten minutes.

When these little cakes are cut into triangles they are called "petticoat tails." When Queen Mary Stuart returned to Scotland from France, she brought a number of the French people with her and they called these little cakes "petits gateaux tailes." The Scotch people thought they said "petticoat tails," and so they have been known ever since.

Salad Dressing Can Be Varied By Use of Citrus Fruit Juices

Mayonnaise Can Be Made With Lemon Juice Instead of Vinegar, and Other Adaptations Change the Flavor With Delicious Results.

The delicate and appetizing flavor of lemon juice makes it a preferred source of tartness for many types of salad dressings. Orange juice, too, will heighten the flavor of a dressing prepared especially for fruit salads.

Many salads need nothing more than plain lemon juice and a dash of salt to bring out the hidden flavor of their ingredients. Avocados, sliced tomatoes and combination vegetable salads may be effective with this simple dressing. Crab meat and fish salads also are more delectable when enhanced with a simple dressing of lemon juice and salt, or if you prefer they may be served with a dressing made of lemon juice, oil and seasonings. If a heavier dressing is preferred for fish or sea food salads the simple marinade of lemon juice and oil may be used first to season the ingredients and they can be mixed just before serving with a mayonnaise flavored with lemon juice instead of vinegar.

A combination of lemon and orange juice forms a perfect marinade for fresh fruit salads. It not only brings out the hidden flavor of the fruit, but it also prevents such fruits as apples, bananas, pears, etc., from darkening.

Lemon juice and sugar is a healthful salad dressing for children and can be effectively used to enhance the flavor of plain shredded lettuce, grated carrots or diced apples. Lemon and orange juice forms a perfect dressing for fruit salads that contain dried fruits, dates or raisins.

Lemon Mayonnaise.

1 egg
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon mustard

Beat in slowly using whirl type beater:

1 pint salad oil

For a sharper thinner dressing, add 2 extra tablespoons lemon juice just before serving.

If mayonnaise is your preferred dressing for fruit salads, try the above recipe but thin it with 1-3 as much orange juice as dressing before mixing with the fruit.

Guests Will Enjoy Cold Party Supper

A reader asks for a menu for an informal supper, at which beer will be served. She wants something a bit fancier than rye bread and cheese sandwiches, so we suggest the following:

Crab Meat Salad

Sliced Tomatoes and Cucumbers

Cole Slaw and Carrot Salad

Watermelon Pickle

Green Olives Stuffed with Anchovies

Cheese Biscuits or Rye Bread and Assorted Cheeses

Beer

Dutch Apple Cake or Lemon Sherbet and Spice Cake

Coffee may be served with the dessert if you wish. Recipes for any of these suggestions should be found in any good cook book, but if you do not have them, write Dorothea Duncan, The Washington Post, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

Spanish Rice Makes Economical Supper

Many Left-Overs Can Be Adapted to Recipe.

Spanish rice is an economical dish because so many left-overs can be used in the sauce.

Cook 1 cup of rice in lots of boiling salted water. When the grains are large and fluffy remove from the stove and pour the rice into a colander. Wash with cold water. Take leftover meat, summer sausage that is too hard to be attractive served in sandwiches or on a cold plate is excellent. You won't need more than 4 or 5 slices.

Slice one medium-sized Spanish onion and cook it in 3 or 4 tablespoons of melted butter until the onion is golden. Add 1 shredded green pepper and three medium-sized tomatoes or 1 cup of stewed leftover tomatoes and the meat which has been cut up in small pieces. Cook for 5 minutes and add to the rice. Season to taste with salt, pepper and a dish of red pepper. If you have any hard bits of American cheese, grate them and add one-half cup to the mixture.

If the mixture is too dry add one-half to three-quarters cup of hot water. Place the mixture in a casserole and bake in the oven at a moderate temperature, 350 degrees F., until the mixture is hot and well seasoned, about half an hour.

Plans to Bolt The President Denied by Glass

Senator Brands Reports on 1936 'Nonsense' or Even Worse.

By The Associated Press.

Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, said yesterday that newspaper reports that "the two Virginia Senators contemplate organizing their State against re-election of President Roosevelt in the event of his renomination or are bothering themselves to prevent the renomination of Mr. Roosevelt is complete nonsense, if not worse."

In a formal statement commenting on the report carried in a special article from White Sulphur Springs while the Virginia Bar Association was in session there, Senator Glass said "neither Senator Byrd nor I has ever bolted a party nomination, local, State or national."

No Intention of Move.

"Neither of us has entertained the remotest notion of doing anything of the kind in 1936," Senator Glass said.

Senator Harry F. Byrd, when asked about the report he might bolt the party ticket, said: "I am a Democrat and will continue to be one. I have voted my honest convictions in the Senate, and this I will continue to do also."

Senator Glass' statement points out neither he nor Senator Byrd has cast a consequential vote in the Senate contrary to the declarations of the Democratic Party platform at Chicago or the Virginia State platform of the same year.

"Vote By Judgement."

It continues: "Moreover, speaking for myself, every outstanding legislative problem upon which I have sharply differed with the Administration, as I recall, has been decided by the Supreme Court of the United States or inferior Federal courts throughout the country to be clearly unconstitutional. Prior to these decisions the agencies administering these invalid laws were cruel and insufferably insolent. I refuse to assume that the people of Virginia desire me, contrary to my oath, to vote for things I think to be unconstitutional or, contrary to my judgment, for things which I believe would be oppressive. I have not done this in a single instance. I do not intend ever to do it, and I shall never make an apology for any vote I have cast.

"But in the last analysis to me the most repellant suggestion is the idea that a representative of a sovereign State in the Senate of the United States who acts upon his judgment and conscience on legislative problems is, therefore, politically hostile to the President of the United States and should be malignantly accused of a purpose to bolt the party nominee."

Hoover Resumes His Silence in N.Y.

Inscrutable Smile Greets Queries on Challenge.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 12.—Former President Herbert Hoover ha donly an inscrutable smile tonight for the storm of political speculation he stirred up in Chicago with his challenge to the New Deal on future constitutional changes.

"Your Chicago statement has been interpreted as showing a willingness to accept renomination," he was told.

"Is that so?" was the reply.

"Do you expect to clarify your position further?" was the next question.

"I am not discussing political subjects," he answered.

Husband Read in Company, Joan Blondell Asks Divorce

Actress Claims Cameraman Went Hours Without Speaking to Her.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Aug. 12.—The once widely heralded "ideal" marriage of Joan Blondell, vivacious screen actress, and George S. Barnes, "ace" movie cameraman, was brought abruptly into divorce court today.

The actress sued and listed a variety of complaints—including charges that Barnes immersed himself in a book in the presence of her guests and that he often drove his automobile against her wishes after he had been drinking.

Hollywood's first intimation of the marital breakup came last night, when Miss Blondell said she was preparing a divorce suit.

Miss Blondell asked custody of Norman Scott Barnes, 9-month-old son, for whom the couple built a "kidnap proof" nursery in their Lookout Mountain home.

Their marriage in Phoenix, Ariz., January 4, 1932, was Miss Blondell's first and Barnes' fourth. Studio publicity stories often emphasized that it was an ideal mating, with both as devoted to their home as they were to their work. They separated only last Friday, the actress' complaint said.

Miss Blondell alleged Barnes sometimes went hours without speaking to her and refused to answer questions. She also said he refused to accept responsibility of looking after household bills and other business matters, even refusing to discuss them with her.

Rapeer Seized For Contempt In Alimony Row

Wife Charges Educator Is $200 in Arrers in Payments.

Louis Win Rapeer, president of the Research University, was taken into custody by a United States deputy marshal yesterday on a writ issued from the District Supreme Court that charged him with failing to abide by a court order setting alimony he was to pay his wife, Frances P. Rapeer.

The writ charged the educator with contempt of court in failing to carry out the wishes of the court. Rapeer posted a $300 bond under a habeas corpus writ and was released for a hearing August 20.

His estranged wife, through Attorney Jean M. Boardman, alleged he was in arrears $200 in the monthly payments he was directed to make her. On the basis of that Attorney Boardman also asked for a contempt rule, and Rapeer was taken into custody. The habeas corpus suit alleged Rapeer, who has written many books on educational subjects, charged that he was being illegally detained by the marshal. Justice F. D. Letts signed his writ, which required that he be brought into court later to test the validity of the order for his arrest and detention.

Engineer Kills Himself in Auto On Street Here

Coroner Issues Certificate in N. L. Robinson's Fatal Shooting.

Norman L. Robinson, a laundry engineer, died in Casualty Hospital yesterday a few hours after he was found in a parked automobile at Thirteenth and W streets southeast, a bullet wound in his right temple and a .32-caliber pistol in his hand.

Several notes found in his possession indicated the dead man had been despondent after a tangled domestic life. One of the notes found by police was written by the woman, and asked him to:

"Go back to your wife and leave me alone."

Robinson, who was 46 and lived in East Falls Church, Va., was found shortly after 6 a. m., by Harry L. Kelley, of 1506 Good Hope road southeast, and William J. The body was identified at the District Morgue by the dead man's son, Lawrence. A certificate of suicide was issued by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald.

Lightner's Team Takes Heavy Lead

3,480 Points Ahead of Huber Boscowitz at Bridge

By the Associated Press.

Asbury Park, N. J., Aug. 12.—Theodore Lightner's team held a 3,480-point lead over the H. Huber Boscowitz entry tonight at the end of 36 boards in the final round of the American Bridge League's team-of-four championship.

Lightner playing with Louis H. Watson, Edward Hymes, jr., M. D. Maier and Samuel Fry, jr., all of New York, had 36 more boards to play with Boscowitz, A. Mitchell Barnes, Charles Lochbridge and John Rau, also all of New York.

Play was switched from the Asbury Park Convention Hall to the home of Waldemar von Zedtwitz, on the outskirts of this city, where kibitzers and other spectators were barred.

The Lightner team's lead was considered safe as their opponents must gain an average of almost 100 points a board to win.

Stocks Are Firm In Trading Whirl

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 12.—The stock market whirled about vigorously today in the most active dealings in over a year, but except for some of the rail stocks and a few utilities and industrials, the net result was negligible.

As measured by the Associated Press average of 60 stocks, the day's advance was .1 of a point to 48.7, barely edging into new high ground for 1935. Rails accounted for practically the entire improvement, with utilities only a shade better and the industrials about even.

Stocks able to make gains ranging from small amounts to around $2 a share included American Telephone at $137.75, New York Central at $23.37, Union Pacific at $102, International Telephone at $12.50, Radio at $7.37, Missouri-Kansas-Texas at $5, and Illinois Central at $15.50.

Roosevelt Tour Waited; Hoover Met by Silence

reelection. There are a number of shrewd political observers who have believed for several months that he is, and his Sunday statement was hailed by them as confirming their views.

It was noticeable that several Capitol Hill Republicans went out of their way to contend the Hoover statement had no significance other than that of a former statesman speaking his mind on a fundamental question—that as far as indicating Hoover's desire to be the Republican nominee next year it had no more significance than if the statement had been made by any one of a hundred persons disturbed by recent New Deal developments.

The readiness with which some Republicans projected this conclusion, however, was an indication of the anxiety they feel whenever the renomination of Hoover is suggested. These Republicans privately feel that Hoover should take himself definitely out of the race, but they know he will not do so. If he did he would have no influence whatever in party councils and some believe that even if he does not get the nomination he wants to be able to have something to say about nominees.

But in some quarters the belief prevails here that Hoover today has the best chance to be the Republican nominee and the results of the first returns in Robert H. Lucas' poll is cited in substantiation of that theory, even though Hoover was a poor sixth on that list.

It is argued that Hoover's chance for the nomination will depend on another candidate to get far ahead of the field. Those who predict Hoover's nomination believe the Republican national convention vote on the first roll calls will be distributed a dozen different ways, with none getting even near a majority and the convention deadlocked for several days.

It is their theory that at this crucial moment Hoover will emerge as the man of the hour and that rather than continue a knock-down-and-drag-out fight the Old Guard leaders will bring about his nomination.

It is now contended that the Lucas poll points toward this result. Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, is first on the list as the choice of 247 Republican county leaders out of 1,565 replies. Thus Borah received slightly less than 16 per cent of "the vote" cast. Of the 11 candidates receiving sufficient votes to be mentioned on the Lucas list, Borah is the only one who has been distinctly associated with the progressive wing of his party.

All the others, it is pointed out, are conservatives of various degrees. The vote distributed among these ten totaled 695, with 94 votes listed as scattered "among others." Lucas apparently revealed the first choice of only 1,035 of the 1,565 replies, which he said he received. His failure to give the full return was not explained.

But at all events, as much of the straw vote as was made public did not indicate any overwhelming desire among Republicans for a progressive left-winger. Thus it would appear that when the Republicans get down to actual voting it will be a conservative they choose. This also is indicated by the way the campaign is shaping up. Everything indicates that Republican chances are best in the East, which prefers a conservative candidate.

Whether that conservative will be Hoover is in the minds of most observers a matter of doubt, despite the group which thinks he stands the best chance. But in most quarters yesterday Hoover's Sunday statement was the object of derision.

Democratic Leader Joe Robinson voiced the thought of many Democrats when he said "Roosevelt objectives have been clear from the beginning—one has been to overcome the drastic effect of Hoover policies; another to improve permanently living conditions and opportunities for the people generally."

Ohio Vote Demanded

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 12.—George H. Bender, in a prepared statement issued by his office, late today, asserted that the Ohio general code "orders the Governor of the State of Ohio to call a special election without regard to politics or economies."

Bender's statement followed his announcement that he would be a candidate for the unexpired term of the late Charles Truax (Democrat), Ohio, Representative-at-large. Bender, a Republican, was defeated by Truax last fall.

"Unless Gov. Martin L. Davey takes steps to do his duty as the laws of Ohio command, court action will be begun to compel at least one State of the Union to maintain its laws even in times of emergency," the statement said.

Bender assailed Davey "and the Democratic press" for "making a great show of parading the high cost of holding such a special election."

Fire Units Get Funds Allotted For Convention

Alexandria Companies Vate Not to Attend State Parley.

The money allocated by the city council to the various fire companies of Alexandria, to enable them to attend the Virginia State Firemen's Convention in Clifton Forge, will be divided among the four companies, for such disposition as they may wish to make of it, since the Alexandria companies have decided not to attend the convention, according to Fire Chief James M. Duncan, jr.

The council made an appropriation of $500 for each of the four companies, or $2,000, and an appropriation of $300 for the Citizens Band to accompany the firemen. Due to the reported prevalence of infantile paralysis in Virginia, the firemen voted to cancel the trip for fear of the possibility of carrying infection.

Chief Duncan has received a telephone call from the mayor of Clifton Forge, urging that the trip be not canceled, but he feels that after the action of canceling the encampment in Pennsylvania of the National Guard of Virginia, and the cancellation by the President of the Scout Jamboree in Washington, it would be unwise for the firemen to participate in the convention at this time.

The funds allotted may be used by the fire companies in any way they elect, according to Chief Duncan, such as a banquet, a river excursion, or other form of entertainment.

Yesterday brought forth the reports of several small robberies due to week-end absences. Mrs. S. J. Nash, of Washington, reported a pony saddle stolen from Lamond's place, on the Mount Vernon boulevard within the city limits. Officers Boley and Welker later took in custody two white boys and recovered the saddle.

John B. Abraham, of 105 Rucker place, reported a lock broken on a door at the feed mill located at 1100 Oronoco street, but nothing was found missing.

Mrs. Ida Wolf, of 514 Prince street, reported her home broken into, through a rear window, and $25 stolen from a dresser drawer.

Cornelia Knapper, colored, of 619 South St. Asaph street, reported her house was entered and a radio stolen.

Henry Knox Field Lodge of Masons will hold a meeting at 8 o'clock this evening in the Potomac Community Hall. R. L. Eddington, worshipful master, invites all Master Masons to attend.

Approximately 30 members of the Alexandria Business and Professional Women's Club will attend the August supper meeting to be held this evening at 7 o'clock at the Little Hatchet Tavern, at the entrance to Mount Vernon. The supper will be served in the sunset room and will be presided over by Mrs. George Worthington Ramby, the president.

Miss Elizabeth M. Ramey, president of the Virginia Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, and Miss Sarah Shotts, delegate from the local club, who have just returned from the biennial convention of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, held in Seattle, Wash., will be present.

William Moore, colored, of 310 North Payne street, after imbibing freely of liquid refreshments, according to the police, decided to take a motorcycle trip through the streets of Alexandria. Officer Grimm put an end to his celebration by arresting him, and Moore was charged in police court yesterday with operating a motorcycle while under the influence of liquor—believed to be the first of the kind on record in the local court.

Moore was fined $100 and given a suspended jail sentence of 30 days.

Needy Children Benefit At Camps, Soon Closing

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 12.—A series of camps for children from families on the relief rolls are being concluded at seven different places in West Virginia this week and have been highly beneficial, Maj. Francis W. Turner, head of the West Virginia department of public welfare, which arranged and directed the camps, said during a visit here.

One of the camps at the State School for the Deaf and Blind at Romney is closing today. It has served approximately 250 children from the eastern part of the State. The children gained an average of 8 pounds.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST. Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Bids for the resurfacing of 30 miles of country roads along which sewers have not been installed were opened by County Manager Roy S. Braden at the courthouse yesterday.

While the engineers had not completed the tabulation of the several bids at a late hour last night, it was learned that the work will not cost more than $30,000.

The county board at its meeting tomorrow morning will receive the recommendations of County Manager Braden and it is expected the contract then will be awarded. It is expected that work will be started within ten days.

Among the contractors submitting bids were Eastern Supply Co., of Richmond; the Barrett Co., of Philadelphia; the Arundel Co., of Baltimore; the Southern Asphalt Co., of Richmond; Carson & Gruman, of Washington; James Gibbons Co., of Baltimore; the Northern Virginia Construction Co., of Clarendon; DeLashmutt Brothers, of Arlington, and the Bituminous Service Co., of West Chester, Pa.

There will be a special meeting of the Arlington County Republican committee tomorrow night at the office of the Virginia Title Co., opposite the courthouse, according to an announcement by County Chairman Grayson Ahalt.

The meeting was called to complete plans for the calling of precinct mass meetings at which delegates will be selected to attend the convention. The date and place of the convention will be announced at the meeting.

The purpose of the convention will be to determine whether the Republican Party shall put into the field a full slate of candidates for county offices.

There are reports that the Republican Party will not select a full slate.

The East Falls Church Citizens Association will meet tonight at the offices of B. M. Bridwell on the Lee highway.

Motorcyclist Gets Six Months For Wild Ride

D. C. Man's 60-Mile-on-Ho Tour of Prince Georges Told in Court.

Motorcycling at 60 miles an hour through seven Prince Georges County towns landed William O. James, 1342 Thirteenth street northwest, in jail for six months after a hearing in the Hyattsville Police Court yesterday.

Private J. V. Osterman, of the Washington Traffic Bureau, told Judge George B. Merrick he paced James as he crossed into Maryland on the Bladensburg road.

Policeman Lawrence Dayton, of Bladensburg, patroling in an auto, took up the chase near the District line, it was testified. After a hair-raising spin through Cottage City, Colmar Manor, Bladensburg, Hyattsville, Riverdale and College Park, James was overtaken in Berwyn, Md.

Judge Merrick fined Roy C. Harvey, 714 Sixth street northeast, $100 for driving while drunk in Bladensburg Sunday. Unable to post the fine, Harvey was committed to jail for 50 days. He was arrested by Bladensburg Town Policeman Charles Flory.

Harry Wicker, of Baltimore, was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction for driving while drunk and given an additional six months for not having the owners' permission to use the car he was operating.

He also was fined $10 for not having a license, $10 for exceeding 45 miles and hour and $1 for reckless driving. Unable to pay the fines, he was ordered to serve an extra 21 days in jail.

Fairfax G. O. P. Plans Full Slate In County Race

August 31, Date Set for Convention; Hope Seen to Beat Democrats.

The Republican Party of Fairfax County, Va., plans to place a slate of candidates in the field to oppose the nominees of the Democratic Party in November. As a first step in their campaign, the Republicans will hold a convention in the courthouse at Fairfax on August 31 to nominate candidates for all county, district and legislative offices.

The convention was called by the county committee at an executive meeting at the home of its chairman, Dr. F. M. Brooks. The committee declared there is a growing reaction in the county against the New Deal.

Several members of the committee have said they have a good reason to believe that, if a strong Republican slate is offered, a number of Democrats will bolt as they did in 1928 and this, added to the normal independent vote in the county, might go far toward swinging the tide to the Republican candidates.

Those who attended the meeting Saturday night believed that, although the Republican Party is locally in the minority, there is hope of winning some offices now held by Democrats by naming candidates who are willing to wage an aggressive campaign.

The Chamber of Commerce of Fairfax County, Va., will hold its regular monthly meeting tonight in the courthouse at Fairfax. The new president, Wirt Ferguson, of Falls Church, will preside for the first time.

The principal topic for discussion will be the possibilities of rural electrification. There are about 270 miles of electric lines in the county of 422 square miles. County Agricultural Agent H. B. Derr has been invited to explain the progress made by his group under the Federal Rural Electrification program.

YOUR LONG DISTANCE DOLLAR'S WORTH

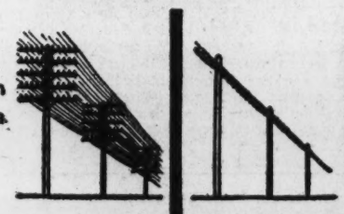
FASTER SERVICE

Ten years ago, your operator needed an average of 7.3 minutes to put through a Long Distance call.

Today, the average waiting time is only 1.5 minutes. Nine out of every ten Long Distance calls are completed while you hold the line.

MORE DEPENDABLE SERVICE

Service was more subject to interruption by wind, sleet and other elements, a decade ago.



Service interruptions from natural causes have been greatly reduced by the substitution of cable for aerial wire. In 1935, the Bell System has 12,500,000 miles of Long Distance lines in practically storm-proof cable.

MORE TELEPHONES WITHIN REACH

In 1925 there were 11,500,000 Bell telephones and 5,800,000 other telephones in the United States, Canada and Cuba to which you could talk.

Now there are 13,500,000 Bell telephones and 17,300,000 other telephones in all parts of the world to which you can talk. By land lines or Bell System overseas service, 93% of the world's telephones have been brought within reach.

RATES REDUCED

A three-minute, station-to-station daytime conversation between Washington and Chicago in 1925 cost $3.85. The Washington to Cleveland rate was $2.00; Washington to San Francisco $15.60.

In 1935, the same calls cost: $2.55 instead of $3.85; $1.45 instead of $2.00; $8.50 instead of $15.60. After 7 p.m. the rates are still lower, in most cases as much as 40%.

Court Halts Road Ouster Of Richards

Commission Enjoined From Dismissal of Democratic Aid.

Maryland Officials Are Silent as to Appeal on Decisions.

By the Associated Press.

Elkton, Md., Aug. 12.—State roads commission officials were silent tonight as to whether an appeal would be taken from today's decision of the Cecil County Circuit Court enjoining the commission from dismissing Joseph H. Richards, a Democrat, as county roads engineer.

The roads commission, which is controlled by the Republican Party, dismissed Richards and named William M. Cameron, a Republican, in his place. The court's decision came as the culmination of a two months' fight by the Cecil County commissioners against Richards' removal.

The action was regarded in some quarters as being a "test case" of the right of the Republican roads commission to dismiss Democratic roads officials over the State and replace them with Republicans. Such action already has been taken in most of the counties of the State.

Commission Enjoined.

Attorneys for the roads commission secured copies of the opinion here today and carried them to Baltimore. They offered no comment, however.

The opinion, filed by Judges J. Owen Knott and Thomas J. Keating, enjoined the roads commission to reinstate Richards. It stated that "the bill and answer draw a sharp issue which must be determined by the court."

If Richards' dismissal was based upon "political and partisan consideration," the opinion stated, "the commission arbitrarily abused the discretion vested in it under the provisions of the statute in question."

If the dismissal was for reasons of incompetency, inefficiency or because Richards' employment was not economically justified, the commission would have been within its rights and powers, the opinion added.

Political Issue Cited.

Dr. Homer E. Tabler, chairman of the commission, testified at the hearing. Commenting on his testimony, the order said:

"We feel that the testimony of Dr. Homer E. Tabler, chairman of the State roads commission, throws the greatest light upon the issue to be decided in this cause. The chairman gave testimony to the effect that upon taking office he made a study of comparative costs of maintaining county roads in the respective counties of the State. On cross-examination the chairman was asked whether the political equation didn't enter into it at all, and he answered, 'It is possible that it might have, possibly 50 per cent.'

"In view of the chairman's own frank and honest admission, it is inescapable that to a considerable degree the State roads commission was influenced, in its decision in removing Richards and replacing him with Cameron, by political and partisan considerations. It would be against public policy to judge the fitness of the county personnel on the basis of their political status rather than their ability to render the highest degree of service as public servants.

Court Without Power.

"There can be no doubt that the courts are without power to review the decision of public functionaries made in good faith in the exercise of a discretion vested in them by law. However, it is well established that courts will review the decisions of such an agency when its actions are so arbitrary and unreasonable as to suggest improper motives.

"There can be no question that the county commissioners are entitled to make recommendations and that they have such an interest in the subject matter of this cause as to entitle them to maintain this suit for an injunction to prevent the State roads commission from arbitrarily abusing the discretion vested in the county commissioners by the statute.

"We are of the opinion that the evidence demonstrates that there has been no valid exercise of the discretions conferred upon the State roads commission by the statute in question. The court in accordance with views herein set forth will grant the mandatory writ of injunction to reinstate the said Richards to his position of supervisor of roads for Cecil County from which he was unlawfully removed."

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 12.—The National Central Bank here today issued a statement that misappropriation of funds of the bank to the extent of $226,228.56 had been discovered.

The announcement laid the misappropriation to one man, until recently connected with the bank.

Store Aid Fires Men, but They Get Jobs Back

Workers Attack Official at Annapolis for Calling Them Incompetent.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 12.—Stirred by the opposition of a near-rioting crowd Saturday night which pummeled G. Paul Gunby, area official of American Stores, Inc., after he had discharged several store branch managers and clerks, higher ojcials of the large grocery chain tonight told the Chamber of Commerce here that all discharged employes would have their jobs restored immediately.

Expressing their confidence in Annapolis men, they said it was against their policies to import outsiders for jobs in their stores. Gunby, they said, was to be transferred to another area.

Gunby was the victim of several angry persons late Saturday night shortly after he had notified Gordon Noble, manager of a West street branch, and William Thompson, a clerk, that they were discharged. According to witnesses, Gunby, in his conversation with Noble, made the statement that Annapolis men "had not measured up to scratch" and that it would be necessary to import men from Baltimore to take their jobs.

At this, several bystanders grabbed him and knocked him to the floor. As Gunby attempted to crawl to the door, some one slammed it and snapped the lock. He got to his feet, but was hammered down again by his assailants.

By the time Police Commissioner Thomas G. Basil and a police escort arrived, a tense crowd of 700 had assembled. Gunby, bleeding freely, was escorted to his car. All tires were flat. Under the protection of police he boarded W. B. & A. train for Baltimore. Part of the crowd followed him to the station.

Back at the store it was reported that some one in the crowd had shuoted: "Let's crack the windows and throw everything into the street." It was not until after midnight that the last of the group had left the vicinity.

Tiny Yacht in Maryland Lake Stirs Big Tempest in Politics

By the Associated Press.

Solomons Island, Md., Aug. 12.—Robert F. Duer, chairman of the Maryland Conservation Commission, today took up the challenge recently hurled by State Senator Harry T. Phoebus, (Republican), Somerset, regarding to conservation department yacht which sailed on Deep Creek Lake in Garrett County.

Senator Phoebus, at the Republican Senators' meeting at Ocean City last week-end, made these points regarding the yacht:

That it is stationed on a lake only 5 miles long and a half-mile wide.

That the conservation commission had added a 40-foot yacht to the fleet it found when it took office.

That is was striking that the commission decided it needed a yacht in Garrett County at the same time that a Garrett County resident became a member.

That the yacht should be named "Miss Appropriation."

Chairman Duer made these points today:

That the vessel is only 38 feet long and that it takes the place of another that had been reported unfit for service; that Deep Creek Lake really is "between 10 and 11 miles long;" that trout and bass are profuse in the lake and that the spot is a favorite fishing center for a wide area; that a boat was stationed there long before McComas became a member of the commission, and that the boat, as yet unnamed, cost $2,000 when new and was purchased by the commission for $700.

Relief Clients' Job Refusals Termed Rare

'Unwillingness to Work' Not Recognized in Hopkins' Report.

Winchester, Alleghany County Deny Abuses of Federal Aid.

By the Associated Press.

A Federal Relief Administration report on alleged job refusals by persons on relief in Allegheny County, Va., yesterday said "unwillingness to work very rarely is the cause for relief clients refusing to accept jobs."

The report, made public by Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief administrator, was accompanied by an abstract of a report on similar charges at Winchester, Va.

The Winchester report, which was prepared by William A. Smith, Virginia relief administrator, was similar in tone to that on Allegheny County.

"The study indicated," the Allegheny report said, "that the normal channels for investigation and removal from relief of persons refusing jobs are providing an effective and, if anything, an overdiligent safeguard against such abuses.

Regarding Winchester, the abstract said: "A careful check by the State relief administrator reveals that only two refusals by relief clients have occurred in the last six months in that county and these were immediately closed. During the same period two other applicants were denied relief because they had refused jobs."

The Hopkins statement said reports of 32 job refusal cases in Allegheny County had been investigated and 10 had been retained on relief rolls, their refusals having been considered warranted. Fourteen cases had been closed in response to a general administrative order that all relief clients found refusing jobs should be dismissed from the relief rolls and five were receiving no relief although their cases were still open for further investigation, and three cases were not actually relief cases.

The statement said two cases were clearly classified as "unjustifiable" refusals to work and in the "remaining cases the circumstances seemed to indicate that generally it was the circumstances rather than unwillingness to work which led to the failure to take the jobs offered."

One of these two cases was said by Hopkins to be case of a man, who would not work for the foreman to whom he was assigned on an ERA job, and the other was a client, who refused to work on a PWA road job. The statement said relief had been discontinued in both cases.

Basing his statement on the report by State Administrator Smith, Hopkins said "recent press stories stated that relief clients at Winchester, Frederick County, had publicly declared their unwillingness to accept jobs as long as relief was forthcoming."

"This story," Hopkins said, "was found to have grown out of an incident in the reemployment office. A newspaper reporter heard two men refuse jobs offering 45 cents an hour. They were not men on relief, but the reporter assumed they were and wrote his story on the basis of his assumption."

VirginiaRoad Audit Calls For Changes

Revisions in Procedure of Handling Funds Included.

State Department Wins Praise on Conduct of Finances.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 12.—A revision of methods for handling inventories was included today as one of the results of the first detailed audit of the highway department of Virginia. The State Road Commission was "highly commended" for its handling of finances.

The findings were revealed by L. McCarthy Downs, State auditor, who noted some "derelictions," particularly in the handling of district revolving funds. This method was revamped, the auditor reported.

Several Changes.

The audit which included two years ended June 30, 1933, brought about also the following changes, it was reported:

Simplification of pay roll procedure, the designing of a new system of accounting which provides a more accurate check on road costs, and simplification of accounting methods for highway activities in the State comptroller's office. The new methods of checking on road costs are said to have transformed the system from one of memorandum nature to a modern, double-entry type, giving control over all field accounting work and permitting preparations of monthly financial statements.

"The highway commission and the personnel of the department of highways gave us full co-operation during the course of our examination," Downs said.

Despite derelictions mentioned in the report, the auditor stated, "we believe the highway commission should be highly commended for the manner in which their financial affairs have been conducted."

Shortages Probed.

Alleged shortages of $2,851.25 in the case of E. R. Winston, Staunton district clerk, and of $621.21 in the case of W. C. Webb, Richmond district clerk, were reviewed in the report. "It seems that these revolving funds have not been subjected to a very close scrutiny, particularly at the Staunton and Richmond office," the auditor said.

A "thorough investigation" of reported overpurchases of automotive parts was reported by Downs, who pointed out that after a "searching" probe his department had been unable to find where anyone had pecuniarily benefited.

Fugitive Eluding Police of 2 States

Delaware, Maryland Hunt Cecil Jail Breaker.

By the Associated Press.

Elkton, Md., Aug. 12.—Police of northeastern Maryland and Delaware tonight still were without trace of the whereabouts of Lambert Hines, who escaped from the Cecil County jail here.

Hines, who was being held on a larceny charge, once served five years in the Maryland penitentiary in connection with an Earlsville killing. Jimmie Jones, 26, who escaped with him, was recaptured a few hours later by Sheriff Eugene Racine.

The men made their escape by tearing down heavy gas pipe in the jail, bending it into a hook and fastening electric light wires to it. The hook was thrown over the top of the wall surrounding the jail and the men climbed on it over the wall.

Earle Remains Firmly Against Visiting Guards

Governor Appeals to Dern After Talking to D. C. and Virginia Officers.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Aug. 12.—Col. Willard D. Newbill, assistant adjutant general, said here tonight, when informed of Gov. Earle's request for a ban on Virginia troops in Pennsylvania maneuvers, that he had had "no official notification" of the report.

"I have had no official reports and no notification of change in plans," Col. Newbill said.

Adjt. Gen. S. Gardner Waller and Dr. I. C. Riggin, health commissioner of the State, were in Harrisburg today to confer with Gov. Earle.

The Governor, after the conference, wired Secretary of War Dern requesting that both Virginia and District of Columbia troops be kept out of the maneuvers in his State this month because of the infantile paralysis outbreak.

Maryland Has Substitute.

Meanwhile, Virginia military authorities have mapped plans for training elsewhere in the event they are finally barred from Pennsylvania. It was indicated some of the troops might go to Maryland and that infantry units might go into training as usual at Virginia Beach.

The poliomyelitis situation took a new turn in the central part of Virginia as word came from Dr. Joseph S. Dejarnette, superintendent, that visitors have been barred from the Western State Hospital because of the prevalence of infantile paralysis in the State. No cases have occurred in the institution, he said, declaring the move was a precautionary one.

Epidemic Reported Waning.

Twelve cases of paralysis were reported to the State health department today, but authorities asserted the epidemic is on the wane. Three of the new cases came from Albemarle County, bringing the total there to 101; three from Alleghany, two from Louisa, and one each from Appomattox, Bland and Carroll Counties and the city of Roanoke. The case from Carroll is the first reported there in the present outbreak.

The White Top Music Festival, scheduled Friday and Saturday, will not be interrupted because of the paralysis situation, it was said today. Health authorities have said they see no reason for halting the festival.

No cases of the disease have been established within this county, Dr. Thomas said, and the action is entirely preventive.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 12.—The condition of Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, under observation at the Johns Hopkins Hospital, is "very satisfactory," according to a bulletin issued today by his physician.

Dr. Lewis E. Hamman said no operation was contemplated, but it was impossible as yet to say how soon Willard will be permitted to leave the hospital. When Willard entered the hospital last week as a patient, he was suffering with ptomaine poisoning which he contracted while on an inspection trip over the railroad.

Suspect Jailed In Attack Case Is Held Insane

Prisoner Accused By Aged Woman Is Moved to State Hospital.

By the Associated Press.

Bel Air, Md., Aug. 12.—Isaac Johnson, 36, farm hand held for an attempted criminal assault upon an aged woman, was taken to Spring Grove State Hospital at Catonsville today after he had become violent in his cell.

Dr. Charles Richardson and Dr. P. B. Hopkins, of Bel Air, examined Johnson and adjudged him insane. Dr. Richardson said the prisoner was suffering an "acute mania."

Strapped down, Johnson was taken to Spring Grove in a State police ambulance. Earlier it had taken six men to subdue him when he suddenly became violent.

Johnson's attorney, Edwin H. Harlan, waived preliminary hearing today before Magistrate Stanley S. Spencer. The matter of bail was not brought up and the case will come before the grand jury which meets here September 9.

Sheriff Granville C. Boyle announced yesterday that Johnson had confessed to the attempted attack upon Mrs. George Archer, 82, widow, at her home a week ago.

Johnson, the father of a 12-year-old boy, came to Harford County four years ago from Tazewell County, Va.

Driver Wins Acquittal In Death of Woman

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Y., jewelry salesman, driver of the automobile which fatally injured Mrs. Virginia Fogle, 84, widow of a Confederate veteran, at Lacey Springs, was acquitted of a charge of involuntary manslaughter today, by Acting Trial Justice W. W. Wharton.

Wakefield testified he had slowed down and thought Mrs. Fogle was going to stop and when he started his car the woman continued across the pike. Wakefield swerved his car but it was too late and the aged woman virtually walked into the side of his machine, he said. His testimony was substantiated by other witnesses.

G.O.P. Chiefs In Nice Camp Are Cheered

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 12.—Maryland Republican leaders today were hopeful that the political seed planted at a conference Friday night in the Western Maryland mountains would bring forth fruit at the Republican national convention next summer.

The guest of honor at the meeting, held in the hunting lodge of Kingman Brewster, was Gov. Nice, for whom his supporters cherish presidential ambitions. Others who gathered at the lodge were former Senator James Watson, of Indiana, and Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania.

Past and present members of the lower House of Congress were Representative Dewey Short, only Republican House member from Missouri; Representative Harold Knutson, of Minnesota, and former Representatives Fred A. Britten, of Illinois; Charles Halleck, of Indiana, and S. Wallace Dempsey, of New York.

There was a general discussion of national politics at the meeting and a definite and personal discussion of presidential timber in the G. O. P., those present admitted.

It was learned that the Western and New York guests did not commit themselves to any one candidate.

Nice supporters pointed out, however, that the Maryland Governor now has conferred with the titular head of the Republican Party, former President Herbert Hoover; has engaged in a series of conferences with some of the Republican leaders of the Far West; has lunched with Silas Strawn in Chicago, and has taken Republican leaders from surrounding States, as well as offers of the national committee, for a cruise on the Chesapeake Bay.

The conference, his supporters declared, gave Gov. Nice an opportunity to make personal contact with Republican powers of the Central Western States, which bulk large both in conventions and in elections.

40 Lawyers Seek Post for Pollard

Richmond Delegation Visits Attorney General.

Forty Richmond Bar Association members, yesterday urged on Attorney General Cummings appointment of Judge Robert N. Pollard as Federal judge for the Eastern Virginia District, according to the Associated Press.

The delegation was headed by Guy B. Hazlegrove, past president of the Bar Association, which has formally indorsed Pollard. Hazlegrove told Cummings that outside of Norfolk 90 per cent of the Eastern District court business originates in Richmond and 90 per cent of the lawyers practicing in the court live there. Norfolk already has a judge—Luther B. Way.

Meanwhile, Senator Harry F. Byrd, who arranged for today's interview, arranged for another on August 16 for a delegation for Virginius Shackelford, of Orange. A third interview arranged by Senator Byrd will be given Thursday, when a delegation for Coroporation Commissioner Thomas W. Ozlin, of Lunenburg, confers with the Attorney General.

Thirteen Pictures Participate in Lively Contest Among Half-Year Money Champs

Baker's Dozen Of Film Plays Win at Wicket

By Nelson B. Bell.

This column has reproduced the Motion Picture Herald's monthly determination of "box office champions" with such persistence through the years that it seems no more than fair now to make known that admirable trade journal's findings as to which are the "box-office champions for the first six months of 1935," published in Mr. Martin Quigley's valued issue of August 10.

Thirteen pictures—and this will be looked upon as anything but a hoodoo number by their producers—qualify as the champions at key city box-offices during the first half of the current year. They fall into four general types. Comedy-drama has a slight edge with five titles. There were three musicals and an equal number of straight dramas. Two melodramas managed to crash the charmed circle, one of them the first of the new fashion in gangster pictures, approached from the retributive angle of the Federal Government's various bureaus of crime investigation.

It is worthy of note that the three straight dramas were based on literary classics of long standing—one English, one French, one American.

First place in the ratings was undisputed, as was the second. Two pictures tied for third, two for fourth, the same number for fifth and five were deadlocked for sixth.

Miss Dunne Does Very Well.

"Roberta," RKO-Radio's picturization of the Jerome Kern stage hit, starring Irene Dunne, with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers—Miss Isabelle M. Parks to the contrary, notwithstanding—led the pack. "David Copperfield" was the uncontested second, with "Les Miserables" and "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" stalemated for third.

"Forsaking All Others," with Joan Crawford, Robert Montgomery and Clark Gable, and "Naughty Marietta," the best of the musicals to date, with Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, ran a dead heat for fourth and the fifth notch was crowded by "Broadway Bill," the epic of a racehorse, with William Powell and Myrna Loy, and "Life Begins at 40," starring Will Rogers.

The five bearing the number "6" in the final accounting were "G Men," "Ruggles of Red Gap," "Goin' to Town," "The Little Minister" and "My Heart Is Calling,' the only picture of the 13 not viewed by Washington audiences. And that is inexplicable, since the golden voiced Jan Kiepura is its star.

The Parent Companies.

The 13 pictures were produced by seven American companies and one British and divide up, in a manner of speaking, something like this: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, 3; Paramount, 3; RKO-Radio, 2, and one each for Fox, First National, United Artists, Columbia and Gaumont British.

Incidentally, the only director to score twice with champions for the first half-year of 1935 was Woody S. Van Dyke, who batted out two hits in two times at the plate with "Forsaking All Others," as lunatic a comedy as you would care to see, and "Naughty Marietta," a superb transcription of the Victor Herbert operetta.

A very nice collection of celluloid footages, these 13, if you ask me—and a very nice collection of celluloid footages these 13, even if you don't!

If not too late, we will now proceed with the happy matter of bestowing individual credit where it is due for the overwhelming success of Phil Spitalny's "Hour of Charm" orchestra's engagement at the Earle Theater this week.

Taking for granted the proficiency and minutely conscientious effort that Phil always brings to the task at hand, he would not get more than half as far as he does in the direction of a genuine ovation were it not for the swill of Evelyn Kaye, the accomplished young violin virtuosa and arranger, who serves as concert mistress of the orchestra, plays the obligato for "The Rosary"—which, by the way, had never been done publicly until Friday's second performance at the Earle—does the violin soloing in the Listz Hungarian Rhaspsody and made the arrangements of that number, "The Rosary" and Tschaikowski's "1812 Overture." Miss Kaye is a tower of strength on the side of a bona fide and highly developed musicianship.

Gypsy Cooper is the first saxophoniste who does the Ted Lewis number and "Pat" Harrington, first trumpeter, who matches her with a superlative "scat" impersonation of Cab Calloway. "Pat" has a fine penchant for strewing mutes all over the place. When she is through with a mute, she just naturally tosses it out into space and trusts to luck she'll find it again, some time.

The vocal soloist, with that deep-throated rich and completely devastating contralto voice, is Maxine Marlowe, and the three other singers who stand on the landing, one flight up from Maxine, are Dot, Kay and Em.

The tricky, little, blonde dancer with the diaphanous georgette skirt is Mickey Braatz, believe it or not, whose mother in her day was a pastmistress of the then-called "buck-and-wing."

The 'cellist, who has her moment in the spotlight, is Mila Wellerson, and the two pianists who do "Nola" in a manner that makes you glad it is not "Lopez speaking," are Rochelle and Sonia.

The only other item of importance that might be mentioned is Phil's neckties. Prof. Spitalny believes that cravats were meant to be both heard and seen. He has a million of them hanging around his dressing room and there is not one in the million that conveys any more subdued an impression than that of a piece of Scotch plaid superimposed by a rampant over-ripe tomato, splashed on, ad lib.

Mr. Sheehan Speaks.

From 1197 Agelo Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif., which is practically Hollywood, itself, in so far as cinematic distinction is concerned, comes the following self-explanatory letter, bearing date as of August 3:

Dear Mr. Bell: Please accept my thanks for the article that appeared under your name in The Washington Post of July 24. I thank you for your kind expressions, and I hope that my future work will merit your approval.

After 20 years activity in organizing the distribution branches of the company, American European and other foreign agencies, the newsreels in all civilized countries on earth wherever there are human ears and eyes, the laboratories and the studios, it is a let-down suddenly to relax and take it easy.

Five-Point Program.

Five items of record of which I am very proud:

First: That I never made a dirty sex picture, as evidenced in "Way Down East," "Cavalcade," and the Shirley Temple, Will Rogers, Janet Gaynor and other films.

Second: That I am leaving Fox Film organization with three of my best pictures for my exit march—"The Farmer Takes a Wife," with Janet Gaynor, "Curly Top," with Shirley Temple, and "Way Down East" with an all-star cast.

Third: That my relations with writers have been most cordial, harmonious and profitable to both sides. Writers are the foundation of the business, because you can not make a good film out of a bad story; and it all depends on the story, as our friend Bill Shakespeare declared.

Fourth—That I placed in many positions of trust and authority many of my former associates in the newspaper business, and some newcomers in journalism, and I am happy to report that they have made good and have contributed much to the success of talking pictures.

Ffith—That I am leaving the company in splendid financial condition, with a fine manpower and organization throughout the world, with the balance sheet in the black, and with the flags flying high.

I resigned from Fox Film Corporation as its vice president in charge of production because I did not feel I fitted in with the new order of the administration. I was urged to remain and divide responsibility and authority, but it did not appear to me to the best interest of the company, the stockholders and myself.

I am leaving for Europe as soon as I finish "Way Down East" for a two-month vacation.

Again thanking you for your friendly article, and with best wishes.

Winnie Will Be Around.

Here is the frank expression of an executive whose influence has impressed itself upon a giant industry, as he says, for something over 20 years. He was the mainstay of the original William Fox organization from which its founder was ousted by a sensational coup.

"Winnie" Sheehan brought the tottering enterprises bearing the name of Fox out on the right side of the ledger, as he casually points out. One cannot escape the feeling, capable as Darryl Zanuck has proved himself in his brief career as production head of Twentieth Century Pictures, that the Twentieth Century-Fox combine has lost something vitally essential in the voluntary departure of Winfield Sheehan from the lot he has dominated for two decades.

There is consolation in the thought, however, that his influence will continue to be felt as a constructive force in the betterment of filmdom and its product, no matter where he may elect to cast his future in the flickers.

One finds it impossible not to revert long enough to the current bill at the Earle to remark that Bert Granoff, back in the orchestra pit where he triumphed for a solid year, this week is scoring one of his most substantial hits with the vocal interpolation, during the overture conducted by Freddie Clark, of "Mother Machree" and "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling." At Saturday's third performance, Bert shattered all known precedent by "stopping the newsreel," That is to say, his applause was so thunderous and so prolonged that Mr. McNamee ran a deep second with his enunciating of the public events until well after the second or third clup. Mr. Granoff and his pipes, as you might say, are doing all right for themselves in this gala week of music on Thirteenth street.

The Ires Have It!

From an irate correspondent who has not the courage to sign his or her name—a species of cowardice that usually elicits no response whatever from this department—comes a carbon copy of a caustic letter addressed to the management of Loew's Fox Theater, upbraiding those in charge for having handicapped the "Going Native" revue with such a "punk, rotten, uninteresting, boring, inhumorous, illogical and terrible picture" as "The Man on the Flying Trapeze," starring W. C. Fields.

An original, not a carbon, postscript to me says, "And for you, Mr. Nelson Bell, if you can't write up (sic) a picture more honestly than you did in this morning's POST, you ought to quit. I hope, however, you told the management IN PERSON what you REALLY thought of the picture."

It is a deplorable fact, but what I really thought about "The Man on the Flying Trapeze" was what I wrote briefly of it in Saturday's issue of this faithful family journal.

Our Systems Coincide.

Perhaps I was unduly intrigued by Mr. Field's guilelessness because his office desk and system of filing so closely approximated my own that an immediate affinity was struck up.

Then, perhaps, my enthusiasm over a picture that is frankly without rhyme or reason, as the saying goes, sprang from the fact that Mr. Fields has an uncanny sense of "timing" his speeches to make them more ridiculous than anybody else possibly could make them; that the henpecked husband motif creates an unfailingly ludicrous reaction in the mind of any bachelor—a bachelor being a guy who never has made the same mistake once—and that at this season of a year a little utter nonsense is good for both the soul and the digestion, not to mention the effect it may have on letter writers who seek to emulate "The Invisible Man."

I certainly told the Fox people exactly what I thought about "The Man on the Flying Trapeze." I told them I thought it was swell

I hate to go back to that Earle again, but it is a strange coincidence that in "Rah, Rah, Radio," one of the short screen features of the bill, the featured feminine vocalists are the three De Marco sisters—Lilyan, Ann and Mary. Last season they were the featured vocalists with Phil Spitalny's all-woman orchestra, in the spot now occupied by Dot, Kay and Em. Odd that they should be on the same bill with the band this week. They sing well, too.

Anxious Inquiry Note.

Dances in Cast With Noted Diva

This smiling prima ballerina is that graceful sprite, "Gamby," formerly of Roxy's "gang"—otherwise, of course, Signorina Maria Gambarelli—one of the most accomplished exponents of the Terpsichorean art on the American stage. She will be seen soon in a new Fox musical comedy production bearing the title of "Here's to Romance." It is in this subject that that beloved diva of the operatic and concert stages, Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, makes her debut as a singer and player in camera drama. Nino Martini, also from grand opera; Anita Louise and Genevieve Tobin likewise are in the cast.

The Gossipel Truth.

Hollywood, Aug. 12.

MYRNA LOY and Metro will probably go to court to settle her contract . . . A point in favor of Miss Loy in her battle with the studio is that they need her for the flicker sequel to "The Thin Man." It is called "After the Thin Man," and continues the adventures of Loy and William Powell. He can't very well get off that train with another wife—even in the movies . . . Grace Moore's next flicker script will be ready for her when she returns. It is titled "The Marsellaise" . . . Isabel Jewel and Steve Hannigan are a new romance. They speak to each other over the long distance phone and Miss Jewel will soon make a trip to New York, where he is . . . Sam Goldwyn and Jesse Lasky have had several conferences, and Lasky may join United Artists . . . Fred Allen and Portland Hoffa attended the fights the other evening. They looked at the various movie stars present like two autograph seekers, pointing out the celebrities to each other . . . The announcer in the ring signaled for silence and said: "We have two celebrities with us tonight. It gives me great pleasure to introduce Fred Allen and Portland Hoffa." And they were introduced as celebrities to the people they looked at as celebrities.

• • • •

Charlie Chaplin filmed an "added scene" for his flicker "Modern Times" the other evening . . . There was a large orchestra on the set and a microphone and Chaplin recorded a song and did a dance. Chaplin sang the ditty in French—that is, his own peculiar brand of French . . . Paulette Goddard sat at Chaplin's feet, out of the focus of the camera, while Charlie did the number . . . Every time Chaplin finished the ditty, Paulette would say, "That's grand. That's grand."

• • • •

RONALD COLMAN driving into the Twentieth Century-Fox studio was stopped by the gateman and even after Colman told who he was the gateman answered that he never heard of him . . . Franc Schultz, who co-authored the flicker, "Paris in the Spring," and Dolores Casey, a Paramount stock player, are making the rounds . . . Regina Cannon is en route to New York town . . . Lorraine Bridges, a Metro player, will do an audition of the role of the princess in "Jubilee." Max Siegel, who was Sam Harris' general manager and is now working for Irving Thalberg, discovered her and arranged it . . . Ginger Rogers is now making a flicker called "In Person," but the title of it has to be changed. It is too misleading. The movie marque will read: "Ginger Rogers—'In Person,'" and audiences will believe that Miss Rogers is making a personal appearance.

• • • •

Harry Richman, Lew Brown and Harry Akst are now on Joseph Schenck's yacht working on the songs for "Susanna" . . . Drew Eberson, an assistant director, and Kay Lynnacker are romantic . . . Gus Kahn wrote a lyric in which he used the word dawn. "They won't know what the word dawn means," said Phil Spitalny. "It's not a good word for a lyric." "It did all right in one song," answered Kahn and he sang, "By the Dawn's Early Light." "Ah, but that's not selling," answered Phil . . . A movie comedian told George S. Kaufman that he was considering a radio offer. "To go on or stay off?" asked Kaufman.

• • • •

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT is amazed on discovering that the flicker version of his "A Farewell to Fifth Avenue" is to be called "Buccaneer" . . . Margo and Eric Linden are becoming an off-screen love pair . . . The Screen Actors' Guild and the Screen Writers' Guild voted Miriam Hopkins' performance in "Becky Sharp" as the best of the month and "The Scoundrel" as the best writing job . . . After the merger of Twentieth Century and Fox many writers and producers were let go by Darryl Zanuck. One of the best yarns about this concerns Patterson McNutt. He entered his office and his secretary said to him: "Zanuck wants you." Five minutes later McNutt was back in his office and as he entered he said to his secretary, "Zanuck doesn't want me." . . . A prominent supervisor, making a musical flicker, walked on the set and had the company stop shooting while he danced a rhumba with the leading lady.

Charlie Lederer got Harpo Marx on the long distance phone the other evening to tell Harpo that he had just written a scenario with Charlie MacArthur. Lederer started to read the scenario to Harpo and after a page he interrupted to ask: "How many phones have you in the house?" Harpo answered that there were three extensions to the phone he was talking over. Lederer replied: "Put three friends on those extensions. I want to get an audience reaction." . . . George Jessel, now a writer, tells about a story conference he heard. The scenarist said: "And the next scene takes place in a little village in Spain." The producer said: "We'll have to get the research department busy, for we want that village built correctly. Let's not take any chances. Let's buy Spain."

McCarthy and Cronin Fined $100 Each in 'Stalling' Incident

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, Aug. 12.

EDDIE COLLINS was at bat in Griffith Stadium on that summer afternoon in 1923 when Walter Johnson shrieked "look out!" as he lost control of his fast ball. But it was too late. The little White Sox captain and second baseman had time only to turn his back on the ball. Full on the leg it crashed into him, and he sank to the ground.

POVICH.

Walter Johnson was still the speed king of the American League in those days. When he hit a man calamity was in the air. Collins lay groveling in the batters' box. Johnson and the Washington infield rushed to his side as Chicago players raced out of the dugout to reach their stricken leader. Fans in the stands waited with bated breath, hoping against a broken leg for Collins and willing to settle for that in the general gratitude that Johnson's pitch had not struck him in the head.

The little knot of players who had gathered around Collins at the plate began filing away one by one. The trainers of both clubs were working on him. He sat in obvious pain as they massaged his leg, his face distorted, his fingers gripping the grass. Still rubbing his leg, he arose, declared he would stay in the game.

Thunderous cheers greeted Collins as he limped woefully toward first base. Here was a man who could take it. Johnson stood apologetically as if wanting to assist Collins down the base line and finally returned to the mound. The next batter stepped into the box, Johnson wound up, let the ball fly and poor Collins, the faker, stole second on that first pitch, beating the throw by four feet.

HE was smart, was Eddie Collins. That little incident down in Washington catalogued him forever in this department's book of ratings. So when Eddie Collins speaks now, as general manager of the Boston Red Sox, I pay attention, because here is a man who should know whereof he speaks when he speaks of baseball.

Collins has just returned from a scouting tour that has taken him into virtually every league of importance in the country. He came back in a fine state of disgust at what he saw, or rather failed to see. You are getting it now first-hand from Collins:

"I saw one ball player in the minor leagues that I'd bet would make good in the majors, and the Yankees have him sewed up. He's Joe Di Maggio, the Los Angeles outfielder who's going to be delivered to the Yanks next season. He can do everything: run, throw and hit, and he looks like he'll hit big league pitching.

"I came back empty-handed because I didn't see another ball player worth half what the minor league people are asking. I traveled through the Southern Association, Texas, the Coast League and the American Association, and didn't see another good prospect. In the International League the fact that Appleton, of Montreal, is the leading pitcher is the tip-off on what kind of competition they have in that league. Everybody knows that Appleton is old Pete Jablonowski working under his new name."

COLLINS, who is paid $40,000 per annum by Tom Yawkey for administrating the affairs of the Red Sox, professes no alarm, but on the contrary, expects much good to result from a change in ownership in the Braves, the rival of the Red Sox for the fans' patronage in Boston.

"Two good ball teams in the same town always help each other," said Collins. "It keeps the fans of the city baseball minded. If one team's up in the race and the other is down, it's hard to keep the fans' interest at the same high pitch. Whatever the Braves can do to improve their standing in the league will react to the benefit of the Red Sox."

Anent night baseball, Collins also has his very definite opinions. He is an avowed opponent of the idea and says that Owner Yawkey is in perfect agreement with him. On this particular subject, Collins can get more than mildly vehement.

"It's the worst menace to organized baseball that I know," he said. "Why, the game was never meant to be played at night; the players don't like it and neither will the fans after the novelty has worn off. But the biggest kick that I have is that night baseball transforms the game into a coldly commercial proposition. With big gates, big salaries and high-pressure stuff on every hand now, the game is having a tough enough time retaining a semblance of its sporting proposition without the added handicap of night baseball."

All of which is very well, Mr. Collins, for ball clubs such as yours with the philanthropic Tom Yawkey and his big bankroll at the command of his underlings, but how about the clubs that are finding it tough to make both ends meet? I don't like night baseball either, but if it's going to affect the pay check, why, I guess I can swallow my pride in the matter.

League Head Hits Aug. 5 Tactics

Chapman, Hoag, Werber Severely Censured for Conduct.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—Joe McCarthy, manager of the New York Yankees, and Joe Cronin, manager of the Boston Red Sox, today were fined $100 apiece by William Harridge, president of the American League, for allowing "stalling" tactics in the New York-Boston game at Boston August 5.

President Harridge described the actions of the managers and players on both teams as a disgraceful exhibition. He gave McCarthy and Cronin five days to forward their personal checks to pay the fines.

Delayed in Fourth.

The game in question was delayed in the fourth inning because of a shower. Play was resumed in the fifth inning, with the score 8 to 2 in favor of the Yankees, and, further rain threatening, the New York club made every effort to hurry completion of the legal five innings, while Boston did everything in its power, President Harridge said, to delay play and avoid defeat.

"Players Bea Chapman and Myril Hoag, of the Yankees, were guilty of indifferent base running," President Harridge said, "and Bill Werber, of the Red Sox, was guilty of misconduct in refusing to tag Chapman out at third base and his apparent deliberate bad throw to first base.

Changed Pitchers Twice.

"Manager Cronin, of Boston, changed pitchers twice at a critical time when the rain seemed imminent. While there may be no ground for criticism of this action, as it is a manager's privilege to change pitchers at his own discretion, it was apparent to everyone in the park that the changes were made with the intention of consuming time.

"The action of both teams is highly reprehensible and a gross imposition on the fans who had paid their money with the expectation of witnessing a major league ball game.

"Players Chapman, Werber and Hoag were severely censured for their conduct, but the full responsibility for their actions was placed entirely with their managers."

Record Amateur Entry Is Listed

Over 900 Players to Vie in Sectional Trials.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 12.—Exceeding last year's field by nearly 150, a record entry list of more than 900 players will compete in 29 sectional qualifying tests for the right to play in the National Amateur Golf Championship, John G. Jackson, chairman of the championship committee, announced today. The championship proper will be played at Cleveland, starting September 9.

Play will start in three sections tomorrow with the Los Angeles, San Francisco and Denver districts getting a week's jump on the rest of the field. Thirty-six hopefuls in these sections will battle through 36 holes of medal play for the seven qualifying positions.

At Denver, Verne (Specs) Stewart, Stanford star, and Emmett J. Rogers, of Oklahoma City, head a field of 22 seeking three positions. Eight players, including Jack Munger, of Dallas, will bid for the two places open in the Los Angeles trial to be played at the Lakeside Golf Club, Hollywood. Ernest Pieper, jr., of San Jose, a quarter-finalist in last year's championship, heads a group of six in the San Francisco section, where two places are open.

Trials in the other 26 sections will be held next Tuesday.

Cleveland, Aug. 12 (AP).—Attorney Benjamin F. Sacharow, counsel for Miss Minnie Bahr, who filed a $100,000 breach of promise suit against Joe Vosmik, Cleveland Indian outfielder, several days ago, said today the suit had been settled out of court. Sacharow revealed no details of the settlement.

Miss Bahr, 28, said in her petition that Vosmik promised to marry her and later refused. Vosmik could not be reached for comment.

Poster Is Stopped By Mickey Walker

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 12.—Mickey Walker, the Rumson, N. J., bulldog, made good tonight in his second comeback start by knocking out Lou Poster, of Pottstown, Pa., in the second round of their scheduled 10-round bout at the Arena.

A typical old-time Walker left hook smashed the Pennsylvanian down for the count 28 seconds after the second round started. Walker opened the session by buckling Poster's knees with a pair of stiff right hands. Then he whipped the left over and the Pottstown battler fell face forward, not moving as Referee Tommy O'Keefe tolled the count.

Walker, outweighed 173 to 183 pounds, had promised State Athletic Commission Secretary Jules Aronson that he would hang up his gloves if he lost tonight's fight.

Sarron Beats Temes By Decision

PETE SARRON, Alexandria featherweight, took a unanimous decision from Joe Temes, of Florida, in a ten-round feature before 2,500 fans at Griffith Stadium last night.

Sarron failed to fight his usual sensational bout, standing flatfooted throughout most of the bout, but still outboxing the Florida fighter decisively. The winner claimed he had injured his left hand in the fourth round.

Gene Buffalo, a colored fighter, who fights like Donald (Red) Barry, of local fame, took a unanimous decision from Meyer Rowan, a midnight-complexioned New York welterweight, in a hectic, six-round semi-final. Rowan, the heavier puncher, was able to land only one punch to every five or six which the Buffalo whanged home to various portions of the anatomy. Despite his much less effective punching power Buffalo was able to deposit Rowan on the canvas once, in the fifth round, when he battered the dark lad to the resin dust with a flurry of lefts and rights climaxed by a left to the heart.

Burl Takes Decision.

Joe de Carlo, a Baltimore lightweight, whanged his way to unanimous decision over Billy Temes, brother of the feature fighter, in a grueling six-round preliminary. Rugged as he is, Temes is no match for the hard-hitting Baltimore belter, who time and time again had him rocking, like a group of old ladies on a summer resort porch, from right hands to the head.

Eddie Burl, the rejuvenated Jacksonville featherweight, thumped out a unanimous decision over Young Pal Moore, of Baltimore, in a blood and thunder six-round preliminary. The slugfest was practically a stalemate going into the final round in which Eddie outwalloped Moore two to one to earn the vote of the arbiters and The Post score sheet, but not the majority of the customers who booed the decision.

Helen Moody Denies She'll Play Doubles

San Francisco, Aug. 12 (AP). — Helen Willis Moody said today her reported entry in doubles matches of a tennis tournament starting at Brookline, Mass., next Saturday was "a complete surprise" to her.

"This is the first I have heard of it," she said. "I have not entered any doubles competition and did not know there was a tournament at Brookline at this time. I will not play in the national doubles this year."

U. S. Is Seen as Loser If We Shun Olympics

(Note: The following first-hand analysis of the Olympic games' outlook, now involved in considerable controversy, represents the views of an American sports editor, Bill Henry, of Los Angeles, who has just returned from a semiofficial visit to Germany. Henry was technical director of the 1932 Olympics. His trip abroad was for the combined purpose of consulting with German Olympic leaders on technical aspects of the 1936 games and observing developments for the benefit of American Olympic authorities.)

By Bill Henry.

Written for the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Returning from Europe, where everything seems to indicate the greatest success in history for the 1936 Olympic games, I find it pretty difficult to adjust myself to the perfectly obvious contrary opinion held by a large group of people in the United States.

Everywhere else in the world feverish preparations are going ahead for participation in the 1936 games. The largest number of nations in Olympic history, 48, has entered. The popular demand for admission tickets, evidenced by an advance sale in the hundreds of thousands of dollars, a year in advance of the games, is obviously an indication of their financial success. Certainly no country has ever prepared as lavishly or as thoroughly as has Germany, whose plans, now nearing completion, are simply staggering in their scope.

All this despite the fact that surrounding Germany on every hand are nations which are hereditary enemies of Germany, nations which are suspicious of her every move, nations which disagree violently with Germany on every political, economic, racial and religious question.

Answer Declared Simple.

In the light of the terrific excitement evidenced by some people in the United States which has, comparatively speaking, very little of this natural antagonism, the whole situation doesn't seem to add up and make sense.

The answer, of course, is very simple. Other nations recognize that political, racial and religious questions do not belong in a discussion involving the Olympic games. The gentlemen charged with the responsibility of preserving the ideals of the Olympic Games, the international Olympic committee, represent a wide variety of nations and are not only zealous champions of the Olympic ideals but are quite representative of world thought.

President Is Belgian.

Their president, Count Baillet Latour, is a Belgian. The founder and life president of the Olympic Games, Baron de Coubertin, is a Frenchman. Both Jewish and Catholic faiths are strongly represented in the Olympic committee membership. Yet they, being what they are and where they are, are obviously more interested and far better informed than anyone in this country, enthusiastically urge par-

Grant Rejects Bill O'Brien's Pro Offer

Spurns $7,500 Bonus and $200 Week for Tour; Wins at Newport.

By the Associated Press.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 12.—Whatever chance Promoter Bill O'Brien had of luring Bryan (Bitsy) Grant into his professional pack vanished today when the tiny Atlanta star paid a return visit to Newport Casino, shrine of American tennis.

Grant, holder of the national clay court title and yesterday's Eastern grass court victor at Rye, N. Y., was mulling over O'Brien's offer of a $7,500 bonus and a $200 weekly salary for a nine-monh tour when he stepped on this sacred turf, where the first national championship was decided 54 years ago.

He was so impressed by the Casino and its glorious memories that he decided to reject O'Brien's offer and continue in amateur tennis for another year, at least.

Defeats First Foe.

After making that decision, Grant, who got his fine assortment of grass strokes under full control only a few days ago, then made his start in the nineteenth Casino invitation tournament by defeating Herbert L. Bowman, of New York, 6—3, 6—3, in a second-round match, to uphold his fourth-place seeding.

The draw was topped by Frank Shields, the vacationing Hollywood film actor, who bowed to Grant at Rye. Shields headed the advance into the third round with a 6—2, 7—5 win over Lawrence Nelson, of Los Angeles, and was followed by all of the other stars who arrived here in time for the opening matches.

Bucs Top Reds In Only Game In Majors

Score Three Runs in First and Go On to Triumph by 7-4 Score.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 12.—Jumping away in front with a 3-run attack in the first inning, the Pittsburgh Pirates nicked four Cincinnati hurlers for 14 hits today as they turned back the Reds, 7 to 4, in the only game played in the major leagues. The victory gave the Pirates the series, three games to two.

Al Hollingsworth, rookie southpaw who lost a 1-to-0 verdict to Bill Swift on Friday, tried to check the Pirates again, but was shelled off the mound in the first inning. Emmett Nelson, another rookie, was called to his rescue and did a fine job for the next five ninnings, holding the Bucs to one run in the second. He was lifted for a pinch hitter in the seventh and the Pirates got to Don Brennan for two more in their half of the same frame. Benny Frey pitched scoreless ball in the eighth.

Jenson, Padden Lead.

Forrest Jensen and Tom Padden led the Pittsburgh offensive, each getting three hits. Red Lucas started on the mound for the Pirates, but gave way to Ralph Birkhofer after the fifth, when the Reds counted three times, aided by Arky Vaughan's error.

Billy Myers was forced2ouft of the game in the fifth, when he collided with Babe Herman in fielding Gus Suhr's fly in short left field. Both players were hurt, Myers suffering bruises, but Herman remained in the game.

Pitcher, Riding in Car, Signals; Arm Cut Off

Duquoin, Ill., Aug. 12.—Charles Lucas, 26, star pitcher on the Anna State Hospital team, was recovering today from a freak accident that has ended his baseball career.

Pennant-Mad Detroit Host To Nats

By Shirley Povich,

A Staff Correspondent.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 12.—A city disillusioned last fall when the Dean boys of St. Louis flattened the Tigers in the World Series again is in a dither of hope and excitement as the Detroit club makes serious motions toward another American League pnnnant.

The Tigers now find that all has been forgiven even if not forgotten as far as last year's World Series debacle is concerned. The Tigers again are the little tin ball players of Detroit. The city is talking pennant, toasting Mickey Cochrane, Hank Greenberg, et al, lavishing praises on the club that is now six games ahead of the second-place Yankees.

The Washington club, which arrived here today to await the opener of the four-game series tomorrow, finds the Tigers in possession of a nine-game winning streak and fans flocking to the park in such numbers that Detroit again figures to set the league's attendance record.

100,000 Saw Series.

One hundred thousand fans saw the recent four-game series with the White Sox here, the record crowd of the season for any one series. They saw the same Tiger line-up that set the city in a frenzy of excitement last year when it galloped into the league championship.

Mickey Cochrane's murderous hitting crew, led by Hank Greenberg, who leads the league's batters on most every count, continues to offset what appears to be a definite pitching weakness. Beyond Tommy Bridges, Cochrane has no pitching ace. Schoolboy Rowe is having an indifferent season and Al Crowder is an in-and-outer. Elden Auker completes a staff that fails of the quality of last year's pitching as a result of Rowe's inability to strike his stride.

Whitehill to Hurl.

Manager Bucky Harris will send Earl Whitehill to the mound in the series opener tomorrow, with Al Crowder expected to oppose him. Crowder has beaten the Nats thrice this season, but Whitehill had little luck against the Tigers.

Red Kress' presence in the Nats' line-up is in doubt. The comeback kid suffered a leg cramp yesterday in Boston while running out a two-base hit and was removed from the game as a precautionary measure, but the injured member still needs rest. Kress has failed to hit safely only once in 16 games since being reinsalled in the Nats' regular line-up.

Harris' recent practice of using Fred Schulte in the Nats' outfield is attributed to the club's desire to arrange a trade for Schulte. Keeping him on the bench impairs his trading value.

Buck Newsom's victory over Lefty Grove at Boston yesterday was in keeping with Newsom's history. He confesses he has never lost a game on his birthday.

Deans to Go on Tour.

Muscatine, Iowa, Aug. 12 (AP). Ray L. Doan, Muscatine sports promoter, today said he had again signed the famous Cardinal pitchers, Dizzy and Daffy Dean, and Pepper Martin, St. Louis third baseman, for an exhibition tour of the East and Middle West after the close of the major league season.

84-Yard Punt by Tom Oliver, of Catholic U. Recognized as All-Time Mark in 1935 Guide

A PRODIGIOUS punt that spiralled off the right foot of Tom Oliver one sunny afternoon in late November as Catholic University fought a losing battle with Western Maryland, a punt that soared 84 yards before striking the ground and bounding over the goal line, tops the list of 1934 collegiate football achievements enumerated in the annual guide released yesterday.

Oliver's feat is more than a season's record. It stands as an all-time standard in this department, exceeding by 4 yards the previous mark hung up by Bob Parnham, of Georgia Tech, in 1927. It is the first record of note ever recorded by an athlete developed in the District, and it is a mark that very probably will withstand the assaults of countless future generations.

Aside from this one feat the other records strike the usual average made over years of play. Bill Shepherd, Western Maryland's bull-like full back, hit a new high for recent years in scoring with a total of 133 points, approximately 20 points above the average. But Shepherd's score is still a little short of the all-time record of 197 credited to a tough gent by the name of Jim Thorpe, who put together his mark back in 1912, when a football player was distinguished by the size and number of cleat marks printed on his physiogomy.

Briefing the outstanding features of the season we find that two players, Walter Byrd, of Fresno State and Luther Perrin, of Southwest Louisiana Institute, tied for the longest scoring run of 105 yards. Byrd's trek was made on a kick-off. Charley Smith, of Washington and Lee, Southern Conference champions, ran 103 yards from scrimmage for a touchdown, the record in this respect, while Mel Hanson, North Dakota State, and George Miller, of Rollins, raced 98 yards through broken fields for touchdowns, another yearly high.

"Harry the Horse" Mattos, threw a 64-yard pass to Bob Timm, giving St. Mary's of Calofirnia, the laurels for the longest completed pass over the goal line. The longest complete pass with the runner scoring, 60 yards over all, was negotiated by Bill Pollock to his brother Bud, for Pennsylvania Miiltary College.

Other records include the longest run following a blocked kick, Willie Geny, Vanderbilt, 70 yards; forward pass play including run, Sam Mattox to Charley Smith, Washington and Lee, a 15-yard pass and 70-yard run for 85 yards; run with caught fumble, Millard Morris, Alabama Poly, 98 yards; field goal from placement, Maurice Hilliard, Bethel, Tenn., 50 yards; field goal from drop-kick, Al Ethan, St. John's, Minnesota, 47 yards; touchdowns, Johnny Oravec, Williamette, 20; points after touchdown, Riley Smith, Alabama, 25; goals from the field, Slade Cutter (Navy); Julius Dammann, Colorado State Aggies, and John Turley, Ohio Wesleyan, four.

Getting back to the District, there is the 72-yard run with an intercepted pass Charley Parcells made against Roanoke, and the 71-yard jaunt of Charley Smith for Washington and Lee against William and Mary which won the game.

Babe Gearty, of Catholic U., traveled 87 yards for a score against Manhattan, while Secino went 85 more for a touchdown against the same team. Maryland's huskies probably remember Wendel Walker, of Indiana, who ran through the Terps for 65 yards and a score.

The longest run credited to "Buzz" Borries, Navy's All-American half back, is one for 50 yards made against Virginia.

Track Record Is Equaled By Mare

By the Associated Press.

NARRAGANSETT PARK, R. I., Aug. 12.—The success of Advising Anna, 5-year-old daughter of Blondin, since she joined the stable of Mrs. Floyd West, continued today when she won the Roger Williams Handicap, a mile for 3-year-olds and upward, which featured the opening program of Narragansett's 30-day midsummer meeting.

Mrs. West recently bought Advising Anna from Jack Howard. The mare won an allowance race at Suffolk Downs in her first start for her new owner and ran in front from flag fall to finish in today's handicap.

Close to 20,000 fans attended as Narragansett opened its meet with eight races. The track will continue to offer eight races daily.

Advising Anna and Hal Price Headley's Whopper ran first and second all through the Roger Williams, with the former winning by a neck in 1:37, equaling the track record for the distance.

The favorite, Mrs. F. A. Carreaud's Time Supply, was badly outrun for the first half mile, but closed with a rush which failed, however, to put him in reach of the other two.

The victory of Hal Price Headley's Hollyrood in the first and the Araho Stable's Forewarned in the third, produced a daily double payment of $20.50 for which combination 651 tickets were sold.

J. U. Gratton's Grog won the second race, five and a half furlongs for 2-year-olds, covering the distance just a fifth of a second slower than the track record. His time was 1:05 4-5.

TAKUS, well placed from the beginning and offering repeated bids, continued willing to the end. MEROVECH worked his way up gradually. TEETER TOTTER had good speed for the first half-mile, faltered slightly and was unable to reach the leaders.

CLOUD SWEEPER worked her way up gradually on the inside down the back stretch, came through on the outside when reaching the turn, moved OLD REB and held him safe to the end. OLD REB went to the front soon after the start, was rated along under stout restraint, made a game bid to go along with the winner, but weakened slightly under his impost at the close. WEE TUNE moved up gradually, saved ground at the stretch turn and finished stoutly through the last three-sixteenths. SOME GOOD closed courageously through the stretch run.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ADVISING ANNA, $16.10, $6.50, $3.30; WHOPPER, $22.90, $5.80; TIME SUPPLY, $2.80.

ADVISING ANNA went to the front at once, drew clear, was steadied along in front under slight restraint, withstood repeated bids from WHOPPER and, hard ridden through the last furlong, held him safe to the end. WHOPPER, in closest pursuit of the winner from the outset, closed gamely under punishment. TIME SUPPLY, badly outrun for the first half-mile, moved up steadily thereafter, came to the inside in the stretch and closed willingly, though unable to reach the top two. BOLD LOVER, well placed from the start, weakened in the last six furlongs. LADFIELD was never able to reach the leaders.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,300. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:16. Off at 5:16½. Winner, P. M. EBONY LADY moved up stoutly on the outside down the back stretch to take command before reaching the half-mile ground, witnstood determined opposition from FIDELIS and, responding to a drive of her hand at the finish, had enough left to withstand a game rally. The latter outran his field to the first turn, surrendered the lead when called upon and, nursed back of the pace, came with a rush when called upon in the stretch and was catching the winner at every stride at the end. COHORT MISS weakened slightly through the last three-sixteenths. MY PURCHASE faltered when called upon in the stretch.

R. PINCHOT, away fast, fought it out for the lead with CHATTERFOL, disposed of him, drew out, but just lasted to stall off RED ROAMER. The latter, taken to the outside going down the back stretch, moved up stoutly in the last three furlongs and, closing gamely, was catching the winner at every stride at the end. ATMOSPHERE worked his way up and closed with good energy. WORTHINGTON worked his way up and closed with a rush through the stretch.

Two Marks Fall, Two New A. A. U. Swim Champions Crowned

Boggs Bows To Ewell In Feature

Broaddus Diving Victor; Title Is Retained By Rita Augusterfer.

THE District's unstable swimming records received a couple of more shocks last night at Glen Echo's Crystal Pool when a Baltimore girl and a Washington young man knocked two more out of the books while two District A. A. U. champions were being crowned and another was holding her titles.

Ernie Boggs, for two years the 220-yard free-style champion of the District, was deprived of his crown in the annual furlong title race when long, lean Bartlett Ewell, former Ohio State swimmer, representing Maryland Club Gardens, staged a late sprint to beat out the champion by little more than a hand in the big thriller of the eight-event program.

Ewell not only won the championship, but won it in royal fashion, plowing to the finish line in 2:35 1-5 for a new District record, more than five seconds better than the former standard of 2:30 4-5, held by George Groff, Shoreham and University of Pennsylvania free-style flash.

Broaddus Wins Diving.

Another new titlist was produced when Johnnie Broaddus of the Shoreham won the men's high-board diving to displace Joe Lyman, of Brown University as the champion. Lyman beat out Johnnie Marshall, unattached, by 4 points, rolling up 127.07 poinst, one of the highest point-totals of the season.

Rita Augusterfer, sturdy Shoreham freestyle swimmer, easily retained her District women's 220-yard championship, covering the distance in 3.02 1-5, while loafing part of the way. Ann Bono, who beat out two Baltimore lassies in the girls' 60-yard race, second.

Men's Events.

District A. A. U. 220-yard free style championship—Won by Bartlett Ewell (Maryland Club Gardens); second, Ernie Boggs (Y. M. C. A.); third, Harvey Deering (Northeast Boys Club). Time, 2:35.2. (New record; former record, 2:40.8, held by George Groff, Shoreham.)

60-yard free style—Won by William McGinnis (unattached, Baltimore); second, Roman Kinsley (Baltimore Y. M. C. A.); third, Louis Adler (Baltimore Y. M. H. A.). Time, 32.4 seconds.

180-yard medley relay—Won by Baltimore Y. M. C. A. (Chasonis, Cummings, Kinsley); second, Washington Y. M. C. A. (Orme, Monoure, Boggs); third, Baltimore Y. M. H. A. Time, 1:54.6.

Women's Events.

District A. A. U. 220-yard free style championship—Won by Rita Augusterfer (Shoreham); second, Ann Bono (Shoreham); third, Betty O'Toole (Shoreham). Time, 4:02.2.

60-yard free style (for girls 16 and under)—Won by Ann Bono (Shoreham); second, Jerry Williamson (Baltimore, unattached); third Margaret Murphy (Baltimore, unattached). Time, 38.4 seconds.

Low board diving—Won by Leonora Taube (Shoreham), 67.13 points; second, Margaret Arnold (Baltimore, unattached), 57.72 points; third, Gertrude Theunissen (Shoreham), 54.23 points.

180-yard medley swim—Won by Margaret Russell (Baltimore, unattached); second, Leonora Taube (Shoreham); third, Betty O'Toole (Shoreham). Time, 2:48. (New record; former record, 2:52.6, held by Miss Taube.)

The attitude of the people of the United States toward matters of religious freedom and racial equality is too well known to require any emphasis, such as some people seem to believe would be given by the refusal of the United States to participate in the games. On the contrary, refusal to participate would serve no good purpose.

Loss of Prestige.

As far as this immediate celebration of the games is concerned, the absence of America simply would result in loss of American athletic prestige. Victories which America would figure to gain simply would go to other countries—some, probably, to Germany. The Olympic games, the impartial world organization, which has insisted upon fair treatment for Jews, Catholics and everybody else, would receive a handsome slap from those whom it has sought to protect. America, of course, would be the chief loser, having always been the greatest winner. Nothing would be gained except whatever satisfaction would accrue to those who think it's a lot of fun to get revenge for bad treatment by injuring all the innocent bystanders.

I should personally think that those who seem bent on using the Olympic games to revenge themselves on Germany would get more satisfaction out of sending across an American team so strong that the German spectators would wear themselves into a state of nervous and physical exhaustion rising up a dozen times a day while a German band played the "Star-Spangled Banner" in celebration of American athletic triumphs.

"Out Fishin'" ∫ ∫

By Jack Hawley.

SATURDAY'S fishing proved to be just another of those days that we hope arrive before or after our proposed trip to the most favorable fishing grounds. However, many authentic reports arrived on our desk indicating that many anglers had good catches at various places on the Potomac. Bay fishing was too rough. The northwest wind which prevailed all day Saturday moderated around 8 o'clock on Sunday morning and gave the late sleepers a chance to laugh at the early risers. At 11 o'clock the water was in perfect condition for all methods of angling and every boat available was soon on its way.

Mr. McCrary and party went over to Cedar Point (Solomons Island) and had their patience rewarded with 42 nice trout, 7 large blues and 56 big croakers. Another party fishing close by landed 30 fine trout, 12 big blues and 35 croakers. Many of Capts. Lore's and Woodburn's boats returned with pleasing catches. Other boatmen out of Solomons did equally as well. Readers who took advantage of our Saturday morning bulletin were enthusiastic over their trip to Point Lookout and St. Jeromes Creek (Ridge, Md.) Space prevents listing catches of large bluefish caught on S. W. Middles last Sunday.

However, when one realizes that bluefish running from 4 to 7 pounds were taken by every boat on the Middles, with the highest catch amounting to 33 in number—one captain assisted in landing a blue that dressed 9¼ pounds (scales were not available until after the fish had been cleaned and iced)—it proves the assertion made by this writer that S. W. and N. W. Middles lead all places on the bay for the big blues. It is impossible to predict just how long they will remain in that vicinity but with sufficient food to hold them we should all be able to get them until late in September or until final migration about the time of the first frost. Make your reservations now and don't depend too much on the week-end, as several captains have advised me of bookings for several days by parties engaging them last Sunday. Don't forget to buy a 25-cent pair of scales. Your fish might be big enough to enter in many of the sporting magazine contests.

L. D. Whitaker, wife, and Dr. Bou, of this city, landed 59 nice blues on the Middles last Friday and this was the doctor's final gesture to the blues prior to sailing for Puerto Rico on Saturday.

If you contemplate trolling use only the pure white feather (Japanese), as it is getting more fish than the colored variety at present. If chumming, be sure to ask the boatman to tie a gunny sack of ground-up menhaden (alewives) on each side of the boat, just below the water line. A peck in each sack will save on a depleted supply of "chum" and form a better slick when used in conjunction with the present method of spreading the chum on the surface of the water. Chum should be used sparingly and at intervals necessary to form a good slick at all times.

If the boatmen that are now using the Middles constantly for bluefishing would only wake up to the fact that it is to their advantage to secure chum in large quantities for anglers instead of taking the line of least resistance and saying they "can't get it," which they can by pooling their supply and having it delivered by a commercial boat across the bay. When anglers desire to chum they don't want to be told they have to troll. For instance, one party on Sunday witnessed another boat chumming and pulling them in very fast while they had to be satisfied with trolling for miles, hour after hour, in the sun, and getting their fish only occasionally. The boat chumming had come from the opposite side of the bay and had brought along their supply of menhaden.

The writer returned Sunday evening from Westland, Va., in company with Col. William T. Chantland, of the Federal Trade Commission, and the noted traveler, adventurer, angler and writer of "Sea Ports of the World," M. Franklin Kline, who has just recently completed his twenty-second trip around the world, making two trips this past year. We were out for the black bonito, but the weather was all against us Saturday and by the time it cleared on Sunday the bonitos had gone elsewere. Mr. Kline hooked one bonito that was estimated by the boatman to weigh 25 pounds, and after a hard fight lost him on the attempt to gaff him. He was brought up to the boat four times and rushed away as many, and finally to freedom. All the bluefish were small and the croakers weighed around 2½ pounds each. The boats at this place are very poor, but this is explained by the boatmen, who claim that it is just beginning to become known as the best bonito grounds within five hours' drive of Washington, and if business warrants it they will start building new boats next winter. Accommodations are moderately good and about what all anglers can be satisfied with. There is no question that the mouth of the Rappahannock is alive with the black bonito and that early morning is the best time to get him. We expect to try it again.

This week should prove to the skeptical that the big ones are here now and get out as soon as you can and enjoy the sport that we all have been waiting for so long. Perhaps the cold water this spring has been of benefit to both angler and fish—more and larger fish—an increase in supply for another year, better sportsmanship.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

FREDERICK, Md., Aug. 12.—Middletown continued its winning streak by defeating Union Brdige, 6 to 1; Brunswick took the measure of Woodsboro, 13 to 6, and New Windsor set back Thurmont, 7 to 4, in week-end Frederick County League games. Taneytown and Emmitsburg were not scheduled.

Middletown's victory enables the Valleyites to continue in the lead for the pennant, one game removed from Brunswick. Hauver held Union Bridge to five hits, one a home run by Nicodemus in the sixth inning, accounting for the losers' lone tally. While Minnick allowed Middletown only seven hits and struck out 11, poor support was Middletown's big help. The first three runs put over by Middletown resulted from passed balls.

One big inning, the fifth, when eight runs were chalked up, enabled Brunswick to set back Woodsboro and hold on to second place. Smith held the railroaders to two hits and no runs until the fifth, when he weakened and Brunswick got in seven singles, a double, a walk and wild pitch. Eaves, who succeeded Smith, lost his grip in the eighth inning and Brunswick chalked up four more runs.

Three Runs in First.

Bud Shilling held Thurmont to two hits in six innings, the first 12 men facing him going down in order. New Windsor scored three runs in the first inning on a hit batsman, error, triple by Grove and single by Smith, added another in fifth on an error and single and scored the winning run in the seventh on a pass, two infield outs and a single. Thurmont went scoreless until the eight, when a walk, infield out, two singles and a double by N. Shaffer accounted for three runs.

Beach Haven, N. J., Aug. 12 (AP). Dexter Woodford, of Akron, Ohio University swimming star, won the first annual one-mile ocean swim of the Long Beach Island Athletic Association today. He covered the distance in 21 minutes and 51 seconds, regarded as exceptionally good time since the sea was rough.

Decision Waits After Owens Pay Probe

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 12.—The amateur standing of Jesse Owens, Ohio State track and field star, remained in status quo tonight.

The Northeastern Ohio Association of the Amateur Athletic Union at a special meeting today discussed acceptance by Owens of $159 from the State of Ohio as salary for services as honorary page in the Legislature.

Lou N. Bloom, president of the district A. A. U., issued a statement saying the board of directors was not in possession of sufficient facts to come to a decision.

Point Out Others.

Since it was discovered from the State auditor's books that Owens received $159 since the Legislature adjourned June 9 as an "honorary" page, Ohio State athletic officials and others have said the receipt of this money in no way jeopardizes his amateur standing because his work for the Legislature has no connection with athletics. They contend that other amateur athletes draw salaries on jobs which enable them to get their educations.

The A. A. U.'s investigation, Bloom said, is prompted by an offhand comment in New York several days ago by Dan Ferris, executive secretary of the National A. A. U. Ferris said he believed that if Owens is receiving money from the Legislature "because of his athletic achievements" he might be jeopardizing his amateur standing.

Routine Matter.

Sydney A. Hesse, of Cleveland, one of two members of the House of Representatives, who sponsored the resolution giving Owens the honorary job, said he did not support the resolution because of Owens' athletic achievements, but merely because Owens' services might be needed to take care of routine matters after the Legislature adjourned.

Owens, who is working at a gasoline station here during his summer vacation, reiterated several times since the controversy began that he does not want to jeopardize his amateur standing. Jesse, a recent bridegroom, said he wants to finish his education at Ohio State.

Owens added that he conferred with athletic officials in Columbus before he took the Legislature's money to determine if they thought it would jeopardize his amateur standing. Owens said he was advised to take it.

Shoots Birdies on Last 3 Indian Spring Holes; Overton Has 72.

VOLNEY BURNETT, Washington's golfing fireman, intent on winning a place in the sectional trials for the National Amateur next Tuesday at Indian Spring Country Club's course, blasted out a 69, 2 under par, yesterday in a tune-up round.

The host club golfer made one of those "dream" finishes, scoring birdies on the last three holes. He fired 4, 2, 3, after being 1 over par as he teed off on the 525-yard sixteenth hole. Burnett laid a spoon wallop dead to the pin on the short seventeenth, and was home with another lusty spoon shot on the home hole. His great finish enabled him to shoot the last nine in 33.

Russ Hollebaugh, Kenwood champion; Spencer Overton, and Efford G. Barnes, Hillendale golfers, who will play in the trials, toured the course with Burnett. Overton had a 72, Hollebaugh a 74 and Barnes a 78.

Nedomatsky, Maryland U. Boxer, May Forsake Sport for Studies

Must Decide Shortly on Pre-Medical Work; Weight a Problem.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

THE sensational collegiate ring career of Ivan Nedomatsky, University of Maryland's 135-pound Southern Conference boxing champion, may end as suddenly and dramatically as it began last winter when he punched his way to prominence with a lethal left that left eight of his nine opponents groveling on the resin-swept canvas. Ivan, The Post learned yesterday, must solve several knotty problems before he again climbs through the ropes to battle for the Black and Gold.

The quiet-spoken youth who went into action with his jet black hair plastered firmly to his brow and proceeded to plaster his opponents in similar fashion, admitted yesterday that he is torn between his love for boxing and the realization that premedical studies will require virtually all of his free time next year. He must make a decision before returning to school.

Then, too, if he chooses the ring, there is the weight problem to consider, for a summer of pick-swinging with a road gang has left the Terp kayo artist as solid as marble and as brown as a well-roasted turkey although he has not grown taller. Shedding weight for the old lightweight division would require the amputation of an arm or leg. It is impossible to get an ounce off his lean, well conditioned frame.

To cary that much weight into battle means that he must face taller opponents with longer reaches, and consequently be at a decided disadvantage. The "terrible" one concluded yesterday that some of those larger boys looked "plenty tough" last winter. If he does move up it means that Maryland will be without a dependable lightweight, while, with Walter Webb back, the team will be overburdened with capable 145-pounders.

Nedomatsky, further, is not too keen about collegiate boxing. The daily drilling for months at a stretch did not suit his fancy. He thinks it was unnecessary. He wanted to box during the summer months for the fun of it, but university athletic officials frowned on the idea.

If Ivan does forego boxing for medicine he hopes to return to the ring in five or six years for one year in professional ranks. As he explained yesterday it will help pay for his office equipment. But to those who know him and the keen delight he gets from socking an opponent and getting socked, he has the fight game in the blood and it is one disease all medical lore will not be able to cure.

Favorites Advance At Maryland Nets

Broida Defeats Binford in Oakland Play.

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Md., Aug. 12.—The favorites had little difficulty today stroking their way victoriously through the first day's matches of the western Maryland tennis championships.

Frank Broida, of Pittsburgh, defending champion who needs only one more title to gain permanent possession of the men's Challenge Cup, advanced with a two-sets win over Frank T. Binford, Baltimore, 6—0, 6—3.

Orange Nine Trims Charlottesvlle, 4-3

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orange, Va., Aug. 12.—Excellent pitching was in evidence here yesterday as Orange split in a twin bill before the season's largest crowd, stopping Charlottesville in an 11-inning league contest, 4 to 3, and dropping the seven-inning nightcap to Wilson All-Stars by the same score. In the first contest, Orange rallied in the fifth to make the count 3-all, and went on to win in the eleventh when Taylor, visiting shortstop, muffed a pop fly in left field.

Wilson, led by Hack Wilson and Ray Rawlins, won the second game through several costly errors. Benninghoff, lanky righthander, held them to four scattered hits and fanned nine. Caskey, of the visitors, was touched for seven blows, but was afforded better support.

Louis Asserts He Will K. O. Max Baer

Rapping Critics, Detroit Contender Declares He Can Take It.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Aug. 12.—Joe Louis, who says it was "just one of those things" when he missed calling his knockouts of Primo Carnera and King Levinsky by one round each, is going into training before telling the world when he believes he'll put Maxie Baer away next month—but the "Brown Bomber" is none the less confident he can turn that trick.

"If I can hit him, I'll kayo him—and I know I can hit him," Louis drawled today, announcing he would start training for the Baer scrap about August 20 at a site not yet determined.

"It will be my toughest fight yet," continued the 21-year-old Negro heavyweight sensation. "But I'll take him."

Missed Predictions.

Joe flashed one of his rare grins when reminded he was off slightly in his previous kayo predictions. He'd said he would stop Carnera in the fifth, but finished him in the sixth. He put Levinsky away in the first when he said he would win in the second.

"I'm going to go into training before I say what round I'll stop Baer.

"I know Baer says I ain't met nobody good enough to see if I can take it. But that's what they all been saying. I knock out one man and they just say it about the next. But I think I can take it all right."

Special Dispatch to The Post.

HARRISONBURG, Va., Aug. 11. As the play progresses in the second half of the Valley League, the Culpeper Champions, winners of the first half, and the Front Royal All-Stars, their greatest rivals, appear to be making a runaway race.

Culpeper holds a one-game lead because, perhaps, Front Royal has played two less games. The All-Stars have postponed contests with Charlottesville and the Albemarle Weavers of the University City, and a victory in each of these would place them equal with the Champions.

Three clubs — Charlottesville, Waynesboro and Harrisonburg, are tied for third place and Orange is only a half-game behind following its 11-inning victory over Charlottesville yesterday. Staunton emerged from the cellar position by virtue of a victory over Waynesboro.

Bumper Corn Crop Prospect Tumbles Grain

Oats Join in Making New Lows; Cattle Dearth Is Factor.

Chicago, Aug. 12 (AP).—Brilliant prospects for the Nation's 1935 corn crop brought about sharp breaks in prices of all grains today, with corn pitching downward 3¾ cents maximum.

Season low price records were smashed by corn, and by oats and rye as well. Scantiness of livestock on farms, a circumstance implying greatly curtailed use of corn, acted as a persistent weight on values, and so too did indications of a large amount of low grade wheat available for feeding.

Corn closed nervous, 1 2-3@1 1-4 cents under Saturday's finish, December, 55⅞@56, wheat, ⅞@2 cents down, December, 89 3-4@89 7-8, oats, 1@1¼ off, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 20 cents.

Big liquidating sales that distinguished corn trading appeared to be largely of a stop-loss character. Reports at hand told of surprising improvement of corn fields throughout wide areas—the outcome of excellent weather conditions that have been rapidly forcing the crops to maturity. Illinois and Iowa advices in particular said corn looks wonderful, and is practically all in tassel, most of it in silk, and early fields showing ears heavy and hanging down.

Despite relative strength shown by Liverpool wheat quotations, the wheat market here gave way to weakness almost from the start. In addition to sympathy with corn, a bearish factor was apparent likelihood of continued imports of Canadian wheat into the United States. Traders paid particular heed to gossip that on the basis of lightest domestic wheat, and the fact that processing taxes are on bushels of wheat rather than barrels of flour, United States millers can afford to buy Canadian wheat at prices higher than domestic grades.

An increase of more than 8,000,000 bushels in the United States wheat visible supply total caused some selling. Extremely heavy primary receipts of oats were also a disturbing factor.

Cotton Prices Off On Light Pressure

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 12.—Cotton was lower today under a little more Southern selling in near months and scattered liquidation promoted by easy cables. October sold off to 11.06 and closed at 11.07, with the general market barely steady, 5 to 15 points lower.

Most of the pressure was against the fall and winter months, while there was some buying of later deliveries by near-month sellers. At the close October was only 13 points above May. Exports today, 2,691, making 57,803 so far this season. Port receipts, 10,313. United States port stocks, 1,092,286.

Paris—Rentes led a general upward movement on the bourse, which was attributed to confidence in the domestic situation and Wall Street optimism. The closing was firm.

Berlin—Trading on the bourse opened very today with a demand for the new Siemens & Halske and German Electric issues which steadied the market. The closing was firm.

Republic Steel Plans Merger

Announce Combine With Carrigan, McKinney Steel Co.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 12.—T. M. Girdler, chairman of the Republic Steel Corporation, said in a letter to stockholders today that Republic and Corrigan, McKinney Steel Co. will proceed immediately to complete the merger of the two concerns.

Girdler said a stockholders' meeting, set for August 15, will be postponed pending completion of final details leading to the merger.

Officers of the company stated they expected that an amended registration statement would be filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission early next week and that the stockholders' meeting will be held about mid-September.

The action followed the recent Department of Justice announcement that it would not appeal the decision of the Federal District Court which refused to enjoin the merger.

Girdler's letter said in part:

"Diligent effort will be made to complete promptly registration with the Federal Securities Commission of the securities to be issued under the plan, also to effect final arrangements for the sale of new bonds to be issued, to prepare and mail to stockholders the required prospectus and to complete all other necessary arrangements."

By the Associated Press.

Valdosta, Ga., Aug. 12.—Georgia tobacco growers last week sold 27,733,743 pounds of the leaf valued at $6,039,891.81, Garland Bagley, statistician for the State Department of Agriculture announced today. The pound average price was 21.26.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Advance With More Caution in Trading Well Over Two Million Shares—Wheat and Cotton Sag—Dollars Soften.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, Aug. 12.—Bulls in stocks had nearly everything on their side, but the mounting prices invited enough profit-taking sales to hold the advance to narrow bounds. Turnover was around 2,500,000 shares, but most of the activity came in the first two hours. Final prices were fractionally higher, but little under the best. Bonds were good in the railroad section. Wheat and cotton declined.

In moving to new high levels the stock list as a whole gave a performance of much greater activity without appreciable advance. Marking time, in other words, became more noticeable. The general tendency to look strong and do nothing was obscured somewhat by the posting of prices that looked unfamiliar to the markets of the last two or three years. Telephone, for example, was bid up nearly 3 points to 138. Steel sold at a new high, up a fraction. General Electric and Western Union moved along. American Radiator was persistently strong.

Finally, the depressed rails enjoyed a good midday rally. Coppers and silvers, after a long rest, moved up a bit. Buying was particular heavy in New York Central. Meanwhile some of the ruling speculative favorites, such as Radio and Greyhound, were hard to hold down. Under cover of special strength an increasing amount of profit taking went on, and gentle declines were numerous. For all the half-hearted warnings now being sent out, the public undeniably is becoming more inclined to buy stocks and Wall Street still is predominantly bullish.

Lifting of the Italian discount rate apparently was a measure taken to put under more control the expansion of credit that must now be taking place because of war activity in industry.

It will be impossible for Italy to avoid inflation on a large scale, whether fighting begins or not, if preparations for war continue much longer.

Gold Position.

The long-awaited statement of the Bank of Italy, the first to appear since the royal decree was issued suspending the 40 per cent reserve ratio requirement, revealed the expected large loss of gold. Gold holdings dropped from 5,523,000,000 lire to 2,257,000,000. Note circulation rose from 12,266,000,000 to 13,856,000,000.

The gold apparently was not converted into foreign exchange on deposit abroad, but was used, for foreign exchange holdings went down from 361,000,000 lire to 355,000,000. In consequence of these changes the reserve ratio was down about 2 per cent. Since it is possible, but not probable, that Italy had paid within ten days so large an accumulation of delayed commercial accounts, the question naturally was raised: What became of the gold?

One of the suggested answers was that Italy had repaid the Bank of France on account of a gold loan which had been made in the form of a sale of gold for future delivery. By selling gold forward several European central banks in recent years have been able to bulwark their position by having gold, yet apparently not owning it. For instance, the French, in their desire to aid other countries stay on gold, have earmarked metal at Paris.

The country for which the metal is earmarked carries the gold in its balance sheet, but conceals among contingent or other liabilities the fact that it owes such a sum. The transaction may be the other way around. The borrowing country earmarks the gold against a credit received at Paris, continuing to carry the gold on its balance sheet, although a liability to pay it has been created.

French Gain.

If Italy has taken a portion of her gold and delivered it to the Bank of France, weakening the position of the central bank, but obtaining relief from payment of interest, it would seem that the deal should show up as a big gold gain by the Bank of France, the figures of which are beyond question as to accuracy. Last week's statement of the French bank revealed a gold gain of 354,000,000 francs, or a little more than Italy lost.

This is no clear proof that France received the Italian gold, for it is possible that what came in from Italy might have gone out at once in shipments to London. The rise in sterling in the last two days suggests that Premier Laval's decrees have frightened much capital across the Channel, and if the Bank of France statement does not show a gold loss this week the theory that such shipments were offset by gains at Italian expense will be strengthened.

Earmarking and borrowing gold to carry as an asset, while concealing the liability in an effort to make a country's reserve position stronger than it really is, is misrepresentation, naturally, but it has been resorted to by at least three central European nations. One of these countries has straightened out its central bank's balance sheet; what the exact position may be regarding the bank statements of the institutions of issue of the other two countries is anybody's guess.

In foreign exchanges a feature was strength in sterling and, contrary to the usual performance, concurrent robustness in the gold currencies. Dollars, in other words, were suspected. It may be that Europeans, seeing our extraordinary bull market, think the inflation germ is working more actively here than do most home observers.

This is the season when sterling feels the pressure of raw material imports.

Trade news was favorable. On Saturday the United States Steel Corporation reported a considerable gain over a year ago in steel shipments. Today the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated the week's operating rate for the industry at 48.1 per cent of capacity, the highest since March 2. A year ago the nadir was touched at 22.4 per cent.

Steel Orders Aid Production Pace

Pittsburgh District at 42% Capacity.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 12 (AP).—Steel operations swing into a faster pace this week in the Pittsburgh district than in many months as work begins on several large recent orders.

The Pressed Steel Car Co. at McKees Rocks, which now has 700 on its pay roll, will start production on the $4,000,000 New York City subway order, calling more men back to its shops.

The Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. has a $2,000,000 order for equipment of these subway cars. The Pittsburgh Board of Education is beginning a $1,000,000 building and repair program that calls for considerable steel and other durable goods.

New York, Aug. 12 (AP). — With volume at a new 1935 peak, the curb market edged higher in parts today. Transfers approximated 571,000 shares compared with 565,000 Friday, the previous busiest session of the year.

Great Atlantic & Pacific rose 3 points, while advances of fractions to around a point were recorded by Gulf Oil, Newmont Mining, Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams and Pittsburgh Plate Glass.

Batting for Morgan Baker.

ATTEMPTING to benefit certain employes who did not receive the 40-hour week schedule under the Thomas amendment to the Independent Offices Appropriation bill last year, the Senate Civil Service Committee has reported out a bill designed to end certain discriminations at the Bureau of Engraving. The measure also is intended to authorize administrators to bring under the Thomas amendment all employes whose work is in the same category as that of employes already covered by it.

Senator O'Mahoney, at the time the bill was introduced, pointed out that the Attorney General had held that the Thomas amendment, which was intended to apply to employes in trades and occupations for which compensation is set by wage boards, applies only to employes whose rates of pay are not fixed by the classification act of 1923 or by other specific statutes.

This led to considerable confusion and administrative difficulties, particularly in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. A plate printer, for instance, would get the 40-hour week, with 48 hours pay, under the Thomas amendment, but the two assistants, working on the same press, did not come under the Thomas amendment, and in consequence it would be necessary to furlough them four hours weekly, or pay the printer overtime, at time and a half, to work the extra four hours. Many similar cases are said to exist. The bill, S.2712, is intended to prevent such discrimination.

The measure is said to have been drafted along lines suggested by the A. F. G. E., after conferences with officials of the Metal Trades Department, A. F. of L.

Miss Sally Miller (C), Bureau of Animal Industry, and Miss Virginia Freitas (C), Biological Survey, will meet in the finals of the Agriculture Women's tennis singles tournament Thursday at 5 p. m. on the Potomac Park courts. Topics to be given major attention at the Yellowstone National Park convention, N. F. F. E., next month, as outlined by Luther C. Steward, president of the organization, include:

"Extension of classification of the field service.

"Adoption of a salary schedule in the classification act providing a minimum of $1,500 per annum for all full-time adult workers and corresponding increases for positions requiring greater degree of skill and experience.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY

What, Married? — By Harry J. Tuthill

Your story of being in a rocket for 6000 years is rather thick, George, but I love the sound of your voice. Tell it again and....
Well...Oh here's the Secretary of State. Miss...?
Just call me Madge, George dear.
George dear? Honey, please don't forget yourself in addressing a friend of Dictatress Chloe XIV.
Your friend? Oh darling, I met him first, and the 18,907th amendment to the Constitution says very clearly....
You met him honey, as an official of my government. He came here to see me, didn't you George?
Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.
Well...ah.. frankly ladies...I'd better explain. I'm a married man and....
Married? You? Oh George! Madge, did you hear...?

Courtney Ryley Cooper's '10,000 Public Enemies'

Chapter XXX—Sentimental Murderer—Part 1

The details of the Indiana prison escape ran along regulation lines: the usual plotting, underground letters, guns smuggled in from the outside, a concerted effort at liberty, and a day of horror. Two guards were wounded.

The Dillinger crowd hid for a time, and were said to have been harbored by the wife and mother of one of the convicts. Then Makley, Pierpont and Clark, together with a paroled convict named Harry Copeland, went into Lima, Ohio, where Dillinger had been jailed, and effected his escape by killing Sheriff Jesse Sarber.

All this is widely known, together with the fact that a number of bank robberies followed in which the original Dillinger gang took part—Makley, Pierpont, Dillinger, Hamilton, Clark and Copeland—following which, some of them, with their women, went to Florida for the Christmas season, took another excursion into bank robbery, then moved to Tucson for a sojourn, where Makley, Pierpont, Dillinger and Clark were arrested. Neither Hamilton nor Copeland was present at that time.

The capture came on a double tip, one from a fireman who had been offered a heavy reward for saving a suitcase containing loot from a hotel fire, another from a traveling salesman who had "partied" with them, only to be amazed at the proud confession by one of the members that this was the Dillinger crowd. Following the arrest by the Tucson police, the women were questioned and released. Makley, Pierpont and Clark were taken back to Ohio, where they were convicted of the murder of Sheriff Sarber.

Clark was sentenced to life imprisonment. Makley and Pierpont were given death; in an attempt at a prison break, Makley was killed. Pierpont was executed. In the meantime, Harry Copeland got drunk in a Chicago tavern and caused a disturbance. He was arrested by Chicago police and held for Ohio authorities. However, through astute work by his attorney, extradition was given to Indiana, and Copeland graciously accepted a 25-year sentence for bank robbery instead of answering the Lima charge of murder. All this is merely recited to refresh the memory.

"So now, the true Dillinger gang was gone, and it may be surprising that even in the beginning this crowd was not really headed by Dillinger. At least two of the bandits were his superiors mentally, one of them Charles Makley, the other Harry Pierpont. Makley was highly intelligent, a cold humorist who went about his work with a joke on his lips and a satirical attitude toward life; much of Dillinger's personality was developed through association with him. Later, whether he liked it or not, Dillinger was forced through fear to bow to the desires of still another man. This person was Baby Face Nelson. Then, too, there was John Hamilton, who had a mind of his own, and later Homer Van Meter, who was supreme on banking matters. Therefore, instead of a gang ruled by an all-wise leader, the Dillinger crowd was largely a co-operative affair.

As to the Crown Point escape, when Dillinger was supposed to have awed guards on every side with a toy pistol which he whittled in his cell, the truth may or may not be shortly forthcoming. There have been several "investigations," one of which even brought about a trial and acquittal.

Dillinger was concededly a dangerous man. He was being held for the murder of a policeman, which offense should be a mandatory sentence of death in any State, whether or not it ordinarily permits capital punishment. He was so feared that he was surrounded by extra guards. Then why was he allowed a dangerous weapon like a knife with which he could whittle a wooden gun?

The Dillinger "wooden gun" was a poor job. It was so small that even had it looked like a gun, the average hard-boiled fighting man would insist that he could catch its bullets in his teeth and spit them out, like navy beans. Then why did it appear so ferocious?

John Dillinger, like most murderers, was a super-sentimentalist about himself. He easily became maudlin and could cry into his beer over a mother son. Yet he subjected his whole family to the danger of arrest for haboring by using the Dillinger farm as a hide-out. With the same perversity, he carried away from the farm several of his baby pictures. These he invariably set up at prominent spots in his various hide-outs. With them always was the wooden gun, described by those who saw it as hardly longer than a person's finger. Upon it, he had printed in pencil:

I have digressed. When Dillinger came forth from Crown Point he stole the automobile of Sheriff Lillian Holley and drove it across the state line, thus violating the Dyer Act and becoming an object of search by the Bureau of Investigation. Until this time neither he nor any of his gang had been charged with Federal offenses. The Negro who had escaped with him, Herbert Youngblood, merely went along because the door was open. He was not a member of the "Dillinger gang."

Free from Crown Point, Dillinger had only one member of the original mob awaiting him, John Hamilton. Thus there was no Dillinger gang. The coalition which later bore that name came about by a throwback to the old Frank Nash crowd.

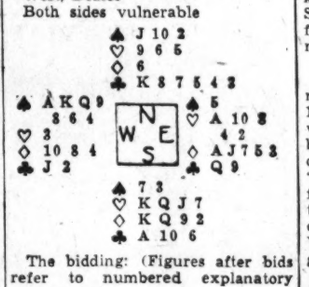
Beautiful When Faultless.

A genuine squeeze is a beautiful sight to behold, particularly when a player recognizes it and executes it faultlessly. Far more often, however, it is of value to make use of the squeeze play's twin brother, known usually as "Forcing Discard." When declarer has a long trump suit, he will often find by leading out the entire suit, he may seriously embarrass his opponents and in their discard may gain information which will aid him to play the hand correctly. They may throw away cards which would have been of value to them in winning tricks at an earlier stage. Many a hopeless hand has been made because after a seven or eight-card suit had been run down, an impossible trick appeared out of nowhere.

West, Dealer
Both sides vulnerable



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

West	North	East	South
3♠(1)	Pass	4♠(2)	Pass(3)
Pass	Pass

1—An ideal three-spade bid since the hand can almost surely win seven tricks, yet has meagre possibilities in defense.
2—After a pre-emptive bid a raise may be given without trump support. Had his side tricks not been Aces, East would have been unable to make this bid, but with two Aces in his hand and at least seven winners in West's hand, he knew that game was possible.
3—The pre-emptive bidding had effectively shut out South's strong hand.

The Play.

North opened the six of diamonds and it seemed West could not win more than the nine top tricks. Two clubs and two diamonds seemed as good as lost. West was not averse to a little hard work, however, and set out to play the hand to the best of his ability. On the opening diamond lead, he played low and South won with the Queen. West false-carded by dropping the eight of diamonds, his object being to convince South that North held a doubleton in that suit. The false-card worked; South was afraid to return the suit with the Ace staring him in the face and shifted to the King of hearts. This was won by dummy's Ace. The maximum still seemed to be nine tricks.

West, however, made the most of his chances by running seven rounds of spades. The last of these reduced the dummy to the ten of hearts, two diamonds and the Queen of clubs. South had to choose his final discard from his remaining five cards, which were the Queen of hearts, King and nine of diamonds, and the Ace-ten of clubs. If he threw away the diamond, his King would drop under the Ace and the Jack of diamonds would be the tenth trick. A heart discard would be equally suicidal and a small club, while it would preserve the Ace, would block the suit so that if declarer threw him in with a club and allowed him to cash his Queen of hearts, he would have the major diamond tenace in dummy with which to win the last two tricks.

South's only remaining chance was to throw away his Ace of clubs and hope that North might have full control of that suit. This play failed, however, since West was able to lead a club and North had to take the King. Now, if North led a heart, South would have to get in and be in the same end position; if North led a club, declarer would win the tenth trick with his Jack, and North could not lead a diamond, having none. West proved that though actually a squeeze did not exist, by forcing discards he gained the same end.

On the Air Today

That should prove of interest to a large number of the citizenry; first, to those who rise early and remain until late for work in order that the Sun Dial will weave its charm for the first word to the last, and second, to those who listen with less devotion but listen, in order to find fresh reasons for not listening.

Uncle Arthur leaves as of the fifteenth, which will be Thursday. Until September 1 there will be no Sun Dialing with Godfrey, but for the last week in this month he will be greeting his "fine feathered friends" on the Moon Dial.

Arch McDonald will take over the Moon Dial until Godfrey's return. No one at WJSV seems to know who will be in charge of the Sun Dial. Ted Church is back from a vacation and I forthwith nominate him as my candidate.

Gustave Heintze and Greta Nimmerrichter "go on the network" at 11 this morning. Of the thousands who are auditioned by the local broadcasting stations, few ever receive that distinction. WJSV's "Three Little Words" were successful—and like many other local station acts worthy of network audiences, the "Words" went to New York where opportunities are greater.

Gustave and Greta doubtless will remain here in Washington, even though their network debut brings a regular sustaining period and their talents are commercialized. For one thing, they have piano pupils and an income here.

For their first N. B. C. network quarter-hour they will play "March Militaire," a medley of American folk tunes and Gustave's own "Spanish Fantasie." The station is WRC.

• • • •

WOL presents another piano team tonight at 6:30. They are June and Iris Jaysnoff, who began to play at the ages of 3 and 4, and who, at 23 and 24 have appeared on the concert stage in Europe.

June and Iris are Russian born. Like Gustave and Greta, they have composed original things and make special arrangements of the better known compositions.

• • • •

Ben Bernie is back at Radio City. But the mythical trips will continue. Tonight's excursion will be to the Ozarks with plenty of hillbilly effects. Its WRC, at 8 . . . Fred Waring and the Pennsylvanians will present a brand new number by the author of "The Last Round Up," named "The Oregon Trail," and will also introduce two new tunes by the composers of "My Very Good Friend the Milkman," WJSV, at 8:30.

• • • •

Peggy Hopkins Joyce is N. T. G.'s guest tonight but the fact that Ruth Robertson will sing "You Ain't Been Livin' Right," is more intriguing. You see, Miss Robertson sings bass! And is studying for a Ph. D. at Columbia while showgirling on the side. Its at WMAL at 8 . . . To offset the evening's hotcha you can be treated to one-half hour of the San Francisco Symphony at 11:30 p. m., WJSV.

• • • •

WJSV will carry an hour of the Pony Express Jubilee from Salt Lake City, at 2:30 p. m., in which period the Boy Scouts who are riding over the old route will arrive with lathered horses and the much whoop-la.

88 HORSEPOWER MAKES IT GO... 800 MAKES IT STOP!

BUT THAT IS ONLY ONE REASON WHY TERRAPLANE IS THE SAFEST OF ALL LOWEST PRICE CARS

Step on the brakes—and you get action, too! Eight hundred horsepower grips your wheels, to stop you in half the distance police call "perfect." And Terraplane also gives you the only bodies all of steel in the lowest price field; and the Electric Hand—for easier, safer driving than you've ever enjoyed before.
